NEWBURGH.

The sale at the home of Miss L. Gandier was well attended. The home has not been sold as yet. Misses Gandier intend to go to Toronto.

Mr. F. Perry, Napanee, has purchased the home of the late Lucy Madden. He is putting extensive repairs on it and it will be the central office for the Telephone Company. Mr. Perry intends being a resident of the village. Mr. Charles Gandier is doing the electric wiring. He also has the contract for wiring Mr. John Patterson's building at Moscow.

The high school pupils are at present writing on their exams. The first and second forms are through. Those writing this are Miss Shepley, principal, and Miss Gordon have resigned, as this has been a year of good results.

... TAKES ... HER

... OF QUINTE LEAGUE AWAY TO FLYING START.

The feature opening of the Bay of Quinte League, Womens' Division Association, took place in Shannonville Park here last night, when Napanee journeyed to the fast travelling village.

The game, D. E. Ming, was called to order by throwing the first ball with the Rev. Mr. Tamlon catching and the Reeve, Mr. Rikley, at bat. Dr. Ming has a very deceptive fast ball which completely fooled the batter, also the catcher. A collection of 456 fans were a bit late in arriving, as the game was called promptly on time, as all other games in the league will be.

The opening ceremonies over, these two evenly matched teams commenced a spectacular seesaw struggle, the outcome of which was in doubt, until the last batter was retired. Napanee, as usual, got away to an early lead, in the end of the third innings finding them leading by 6 to 1. Deseronto, however, were able to touch him with errors in the fourth, their rally netting them seven runs. Napanee came back strong with two in the fourth and three in the fifth, but after that were held scoreless by the superb pitching and splendid support of Miss Wagar. Deseronto were able to squeeze one across in the eighth, and a last minute rally in the ninth gave the Ponies five runs and the game.

The Napanee Riverdales are a very fine ball team, and are deserving and getting splendid support by the fans. Win, lose or draw, there is always a certainty of a fast game when they are in action. It is pleasant to note that the spectators gave the visiting players a most appropriate for a fine bit of play as our own girls received. Our girls are a much improved combination over the team who played Napanee here a short while ago, and every game finds them going better. Their coach, Mrs. Hinch, has the... in hand, Napanee Riverdales will be perched up among the leaders.

It is likely their chief trouble, self-consciousness, will be overcome with their games away from home.

RIVERDALES HIT THEIR STRIDE.

Beat Ponies 9-6 in Deseronto.

On Friday, the Riverdales gave Deseronto a return exhibition game, and finally came out on top. Napanee's strongest players were not all present, R. Dickson and M. Rikley being absent from the lineup, but the girls were at last got a chance to get into the line-up, played like champions, and when our team is going well no team in this district can stop them. It was a real ball game, closely contested every moment, but Napanee had the edge all the way. Twelve players were used and each acquitted herself very creditably.

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN.

KING GOVERNMENT RESIGNS

MEIGHEN ACCEPTS TASK OF FORMING GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, June 28.—The King Government has fallen. Before a crowded, breathless Commons this afternoon, Premier King announced that he had asked and been refused dissolution by his Excellency, the Governor-General and that he had tendered his resignation.

DROP OF PIN COULD BE HEARD

During which there were probably a thousand people in the Chamber, the drop of a pin could be heard, when the Prime Minister interrupted the early formalities to make his statement. He read the brief announcement from a sheet of foolscap paper and followed with a motion to adjourn.

Brief discussion ensued between Mr. King and Mr. Meighen, the Prime Minister-to-be, as to what would now happen. The temper of the House displayed itself when Solicitor-General Cannon arose to protest that Mr. Meighen could not discuss a motion to adjourn. He was met with Conservative cries of "Sit down" and "Shut up."

MEIGHEN AND STEVENS LIONIZED

Mr. Speaker supported the contention that the motion to adjourn was not debatable. In the absence of any opposition to the proposal, it was declared carried unanimously. And as Mr. Speaker left his dais the victorious Conservatives broke into ringing cheers. They filed out into their lobbies still cheering, and lionized their leader, Mr. Meighen, and H. H. Stevens, whose 1923 Customs Committee revelations precipitated the downfall of the Administration.

The Liberals countered with a demonstration of their own. Standing in their places, they returned the cheers of the victors, but there was lacking in them the tremendous volume of the Conservative shout. Mr. King afterwards remained smiling at his desk and received the handshakes of scores of his followers as they filed past him.

The throngs of spectators who assembled at the gallery doors before 2 o'clock today got their excitement without any delay whatever. The House was called a few minutes after 2 o'clock, a report of the Privy Bills Committee was presented, Mr. King arose to make a statement and was advised by Mr. Speaker to "wait," and a moment later Mr. was on his feet reading the fateful statement. It was all over so quickly that scores did not get the import of it until they had discussed it with friends outside the Chamber.

PRE-NATAL LETTERS AND ADVICE.

The system of distribution of pre-natal literature recently arranged by the Child Hygiene Committee of the Canadian Council on Child Welfare, and the Provincial Health Departments of the various provinces, scores of miles from the railways and miles from a post office. Other applications come from the large centres of population with well established health services where doctors or nurses have advised their patients to write for such excellent information available in these letters.

The letters have been prepared by an especially well qualified committee of medical men, and were distributed only after consultation with the Provincial Departments of Health. They are designed to contribute to the superb effort the Canadian people are making to reduce their infant and maternal mortality rate, and to improve the whole average of infant health across the Dominion by carrying pre-natal advice and information to the expectant mothers in the home.

A letter to the Provincial Department of Health of your own province, or to the Canadian Council on Child Welfare, Plaza Building, Ottawa, will bring the letter service free.

JANE GOUDE

Goude, and her programs are designed, first of all, to please her audiences. Humorous and serious readings and impersonations ranging from Riley to Shakespeare are included in her repertoire, Delightful bits of pure comedy sparkle among emotional and dramatic numbers. A distinctly original feature of her work consists of the exemplification, in artistic pose, of classic stories.

All Miss Goude's selections are interpreted with a sincerity and ability that have made her a favorite wherever she has appeared.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF RICHMOND TOWNSHIP

The Annual Convention of Richmond Township Religious Education Council was held in Empey Hill United Church on Friday, June 18th, with President George H. Brooks in the chair, and a number of the Sunday Schools well represented.

The afternoon session was opened at 1.30, Rev. James Batstone conducting the Devotional Exercises. The President gave a concise outline of the work before the Council, and Secretary W. Frisken presented his annual report. The Department Superintendents were then called upon. Mrs. J. Smith gave an interesting account of the Children's Division and offered a number of suggestions for increasing the efficiency of the school during the new church year. Mrs. G. H. Brooks pointed out the difficulty of carrying on Girls' Work in rural communities, where mixed classes are the rule and in town, where G.G.I.T. groups are functioning.

Mr. W. T. MacKenzie could not attend in person, but his report on Boys' Work was on hand and read by Mrs. MacGregor, County Secretary.

Mr. W. T. Winter presented a very encouraging report of the Adult Division, showing twenty-three Bible classes in the ten Township Schools.

Rev. C. J. Wilson, Superintendent Teacher Training, reported the Town Class in Trinity United Church experiencing a good year and the rural class meeting in Roblin Parsonage another successful and interesting season.

Mrs. Burnell Denison's report of the Missionary Department included the information that $514 was raised in the Sunday Schools for Missionary purposes.

Mrs. Ben Denison reviewed the work of the Home Department and Mrs. N. B. Miller on behalf of the Temperance Department was able to report decided progress with a Temperance Secretary in every school and 345 pledged members.

The Round Table Conference, conducted by Rev. Roy Rickard, Representative of the Ontario Religious Education Council, was a feature of very great interest. The many problems incident to Sunday School work in town and country were freely discussed. The Standard Chart was explained, and Rev. Rickard's leadership generally present spent an interesting and instructive time.

At the close of the afternoon session, the Empey Hill United Church served a sumptuous tea to the delegates. The social hour and delicious viands were thoroughly enjoyed.

The evening session commenced with a number of selections by the Roblin Orchestra, which ably rendered. Rev. Roy Rickard conducted a song service and Rev. R. J. Merriam led in the Devotional Exercises.

The report of the Nominating Committee as presented by the Secretary was received and presented. The following are the officers for the new church year:

President—George H. Brooks.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. C. Hudgins.
Sec.-Treas.—Wm. Frisken.
Supt. Children's Division—Mrs. A. J. Smith.
Supt. Girls' Work—Mrs. G. H. Brooks.
Supt. Boys' Work—W. T. MacKenzie.
Supt. Adult Dept.—W. J. Winter.
Home Dept.—Mrs. S. E. Baker.
Supt. Teacher Training—Rev. C. J. Wilson.
Supt. Missionary Dept.—Miss Grace Oliver.
Supty. Temperance Dept.—Mrs. N. B. Miller.

Mr. A. MacGregor installed the officers in his usual happy way.

The report of the Resolutions Committee was read by Rev. C. J. Wilson and every resolution adopted. The one referring to the Ontario Temperance Act was carried by a unanimous standing vote of a convention that filled the large church. The resolutions were as follows:

1. That each school be urged to secure the Standard Chart for the local school and have it placed in a prominent position in the school building, thus encouraging each school to measure up to its standard.

2. That all our Church schools by their Executive, a worthy Missionary Objective and endeavour should have placed before them to bring them to a higher missionary standard of contribution.

3. That we pledge our support to the County Girls' Camp at Varty Lake, July 9th to 17th, believing that this Camp is in the best interest of the girls of our County.

4. That we pledge our hearty support to the Ontario Temperance Act.

5. That we urge each school to recognize the danger of the cigarette evil and suggest special education to warn against this dreadful habit.

6. That we further urge the importance of pledge signing in all our schools against the cigarette and indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

7. That we recommend a collection be taken once a year in each school to provide a Temperance Fund to be used at the discretion of the Township Temperance Secretary in distributing Temperance literature.

8. That we express our appreciation to Mr. MacGregor and the other members of the orchestra from St. Andrew's Church, for the splendid music which they provided at the evening session.

9. That we wish to tender our thanks to the Pastor and officials of Empey Hill Church for the arrangements and use of this building and also our very hearty thanks to the ladies of Empey Hill for the sumptuous supper served in connection with this Convention.

Rev. C. J. Wilson delivered a brief address on Temperance, emphasizing the importance of systematic instruction for the benefit of old and young re the evils resulting from indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

Rev. Roy Rickard held the undivided attention of the Convention as he eloquently pleaded the claims of the rising generation for an environment distinctly Christian as they prepare for the obligations of Adult life.

The invitation from St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, to hold the next Convention there, was unanimously accepted.

The hymn "Stand up for Jesus" was sung and one of the best Conventions in the history of Richmond Township, was closed by Rev. James Batstone pronouncing the benediction.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS GATHER AT TAMWORTH

A convention of temperance workers of Frontenac-Addington was held on Wednesday, afternoon and evening at Tamworth. The afternoon meeting was well attended, but the evening meeting did not draw as large a crowd.

The afternoon meeting was opened by Rev. Mr. Thornley, pastor of the United Church at Tamworth. Mr. J. R. Donaldson, the organizer for south-eastern Ontario, presided. Earl Campbell was elected secretary pro tem.

The platform of the Prohibition Union was read, discussed and adopted. The following officers were elected:

President, Frank Anglin, Sydenham; Vice-presidents, Miss Paul, Verona; Mrs. Snyder, Parham; secretary, Rev. A. S. Doggett, Harrowsmith; treasurer, J. Huffman.

Chairmen of municipalities were appointed as follows:

Camden, W. J. Mellow, Enterprise; Newburgh, W. J. Adair, Newburgh; Sheffield, S. White, Tamworth; Kaladar and Barrie, Rev. Mr. Wood, Elmhurst; Ashby, J. E. Barker, Arden; Clarendon and Miller, John Glenn, Clarendon; Anden, D. J. Crook, Mountain Grove; Olden, A. Snyder, Sharbot Lake; Hinchinbrooke, A. C. Reynolds, Godfrey; Bedford, Miss B. Wilson, Harlowe; Hungerford, Loborough, George Freeman, Sydenham; Portland, Eugene Goodberry, Verona.

Mr. Frank Anglin presided at the evening meeting, when addresses were delivered by Mrs. E. Brewster, secretary of the W.C.T.U., at Sydenham, who made an appeal particularly to the women voters; Rev. G. J. Gall, of Mountain Grove, who spoke of the benefits of prohibition; Rev. A. S. Doggett, who pointed out that from 1902 to 1916 the education-al efforts of the temperance workers had somewhat slackened, and asked for renewed energy; J. R. Donaldson, who made an appeal particularly to the young people, and who maintained that the real issue in the coming election would be between the prohibition forces and those opposed. It was very evident that there was a determination to make the prohibition vote count for something in the next election.

A meeting of workers in the Frontenac section of Frontenac-Lennox was held in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday afternoon for organization purposes.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

CONWAY

The June meeting of Conway Women's Institute was held on Tuesday, June 22nd, in the Union Church. A goodly number of ladies attended and all delighted with the speaker, Mrs. E. Lowe. The president, Mrs. A. Young, opened the meeting in the usual manner. Miss Rawlinson played the opening ode. The year's report shows a large cash balance on hand. Mrs. Stainton sang sweetly, then Mrs. Young introduced Mrs. Lowe to her audience.

Mrs. Lowe first gave an inspiring talk on Institute work. The aim and object of each member must be to help, to all pull together. She commended Conway Institute for its different committees, such as the flower committee, the food committee, etc. She thought there should also be a social committee to organize clubs, etc., for the young people, and chaperone their outings, to provide amusement and to look after the health of the public school pupils in our vicinity. In fact her slogan is "do all you can and then make an extra effort to do some more good. Be sure to visit the sick." She repeated an exquisite little verse, which runs something like this:

A rose to the living, if given,
Is worth many wreaths to the dead;
If we have not the roses to send,
Let us go ourselves and give a smile and a word of cheer.

Mrs. Lowe then gave a fine address on "The Value of Self Control," and "The Girl Wanted." Practice self control from childhood. You can make or mar your life. The self-controlled person has poise and ability, also health and good looks and power to rule others. She spoke a few moments on "The Girl Wanted." The kind of girls we need to raise, of the different ways and means of earning their own money and independence. The day is past when it was necessary to teach school, dress-make or get married. Education opens up a great field of work. Nursing is a fine profession and girls who love the country are raising poultry. Keeping bees, etc.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Lowe for her inspiring talk. The roll call was well responded to by flower members. After singing "God Save the King," all repaired to the basement, where about 50 ladies sat down to lunch. Flowers and daintily set tables added to the attraction of the goodies provided and an enjoyable social time was spent.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, July 13th, with Magdeane Farm, the home of Mrs. E. Fitchett. All members are asked to attend and each bring a friend.

DESERONTO TAKES OPENER

BAY OF QUINTE LEAGUE AWAY TO FLYING START.

The formal opening of the Bay of Quinte League, Womens' Ontario Softball Association, took place in Riverdale Park here last Tuesday evening, when Napanee was at home to the fast travelling Deseronto Ponies.

The Mayor, Dr. E. Ming, was asked to officiate by throwing the first ball, with the Rev. Mr. Tanton catching and the Reeve, Mr. M. F. Graham, at bat. During his a very deceptive fast ball, which completely fooled the batter, also the catcher. A crowd of 450 fans were a bit late in arriving, as the game was called promptly on time, as all other games in the league will be.

The opening ceremonies over, these two evenly matched teams commenced a spectacular seesaw struggle, the outcome of which was in doubt, until the last batter was retired. Napanee, as was to go away to an early lead, the end of the third innings finding them leading by 6 to 1. Deseronto, however, were able to bunch hits with errors in the fourth, their rally netting them seven runs. Napanee came back strong with two in the fourth and three in the fifth, but after that were held scoreless by the superb pitching and splendid support given to Miss Wagar. Deseronto were able to squeeze one across in the eighth, and a last minute rally in the ninth gave the Ponies five runs and the game.

The Napanee Riverdales are a very fine ball team, and deserving and getting splendid support by the fans. With loser or draw, there is always a certainty of a fast game when they are in action. It is pleasant that the spectators gave the visiting players as much appreciation for a fine bit of play as our own girls received. Our girls are a much improved combination over last year's Napanee team, and only a short while ago, and every game finds them going better. There is little doubt that when the league is finished Napanee Riverdales will be perched up among the leaders.

There is likely their chief trouble, self-consciousness, will be overcome with their games away from home.

RIVERDALES HIT THEIR STRIDE

Beat Pointes 9-6 — Deseronto

On Friday, the riverdales gave Deseronto a fast exhibition game, and finally came out on top. Napanee—Congress players were not all present, R. Dickson and M. Rikley being absent from the lineup, but they soon got at last got a chance to get into the line-up, played fine champ... and when one team is good ... way to begin it is a treat ... game. It was a treat ... game closely ... Napanee ... all the way. Twelve pitchers were used, and a good deal of speed was exhibited.

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN

MEIGHEN ACCEPTS TASK OF FORMING GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, June 28. The King Government has fallen. Before the close of a night session this afternoon, Premier King announced that he had asked and been refused dissolution by his Excellency the Governor-General and that he had tendered his resignation.

DROP OF PIN COULD BE HEARD

Although there were probably a thousand people in the Chamber, the drop of a pin could be heard when the Prime Minister interrupted the early formalities to make his statement. He read the usual announcement from a sheet of foolscap paper and followed with a motion to adjourn.

Brief discussion ensued between Mr. King and Mr. Meighen, the Prime Minister asking as to what would now happen. In the tempest of the times Speaker Sheriff when solicitor-general Cannot advise to proceed and Mr Meighen could not discuss a motion to adjourn. He was met with Conservative cries of sit down, and "Shut up."

MEIGHEN AND STEVENS IN 1914

Mr Speaker supported the contention that the motion to adjourn was not debatable. In the absence of any opposition to the proposal it was declared carried unanimously. And as Mr. Speaker left the chair the Conservative benches rose and cheered Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. H. H. Stevens, who, with the former, received the plaudits of the House.

The latter appeared with a broad smile on his face, and after a demonstration of their own, Conservatives in their places. They took their seats on the front bench on the right of the Speaker's chair. Mr. King remained in his seat on the opposition benches. Mr. Meighen and Mr. Stevens were in the same positions they occupied in 1914, when they were called to the Union Government.

The Annual Convention of Richmond Township Religious Education Council was held in Empey Hill United Church on Friday, June 18th, with President George H. Brooks in the chair, and a majority of the Sunday Schools well represented.

The afternoon session was opened at 1.30. Rev. James Batstone conducting the Devotional Exercises. The President gave a concise outline of the work before the Council, and Secretary W. Ericken presented his annual report. The Department Superintendents were then called upon. Mrs. H. J. Smith gave an interesting account of the Children's Division and offered a number of suggestions for increasing the efficiency of the school during the new church year. Mrs. G. H. Brooks pointed out the authority of carrying on Girls' Work in rural communities, where mixed classes are the rule and in towns where G.G.I.T. groups are functioning.

Mr. W. J. MacKenzie could not attend in person, but his report on Boys' Work was on hand and read by Mrs. MacGregor, County Secretary.

Mr. W. J. Wagar presented a very encouraging report of the Adult Division, showing twenty-six classes in existence in the Township Schools.

Rev. C. J. Wilson, Superintendent Teacher Training, reported the Local Class in Training in Union Church experiencing a good year, also the many classes meeting in Bible Study Circles. A helpful and interesting report.

Miss Bessie Dickson's report of the Temperance Department, the organization of which was started in the Sunday Schools for Missionary purposes, was read by Miss Wagar. The work of the Home Department and Mrs. N. B. Miller on behalf of the Temperance Department, also the Press, were presented, with a Temperance Song Service every evening, and a Temperance Rally.

The Round Table Conference conducted by Rev. R. S. Moore, Rev. Batstone and Rev. Wilson, was a feature of very great interest. The many problems decided in the Sunday School work and the methods of country work were freely discussed.

The Standard Chart was explained. Under this Council leadership Lobsticks George Ferguson, present agent on Riverdales and instructive time.

At the close of the afternoon session, the ladies of Empey Hill church served a sumptuous supper to the delegates. The tables were prettily decorated with flowers and presided over by Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible]. The evening session was opened with a song service conducted by Rev. R. S. Moore. Rev. Batstone led in prayer. Rev. R. J. Morgan, Chairman of the Executive Committee, addressed the meeting on the work of the Council. Rev. Batstone also addressed the meeting. Rev. R. J. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY G. C. TRUMBULL,
(Editor of The Sunday School Times.)

ISRAEL ENSLAVED IN EGYPT.

Sunday, July 5.—Exodus 1 : 1-14.

Golden Text—The Lord will not cast off His people (Psa. 94 : 14).

Three months' studies in Genesis have been completed; now we have almost three months in Exodus. We could hardly find two books more widely different in character and subject matter; yet each is of the Holy Spirit's authorship, written by the hand of Moses.

Exodus has been called the Book of Departure—another picture of the Pilgrimage leading to the King's banquet hall." In Dr. J. W. Weddell's volume, "Your Study Bible," giving illuminating views of each of the sixty-six books of the Bible, are the following comments on Exodus: Key word 1 : Passover ; the key text 12 : 11 : "Ye shall eat it in haste ; it is the Lord's passover."

The book may be divided into two parts : I. Preparation for the Exodus ; preparation of Moses (2-4) ; preparation of Pharaoh (5-11) ; preparation of Israel (12, 13). II. The Exodus ; Egypt to Sinai (14-18) ; at Sinai (19-40).

Dr. Weddell suggests discovering our own names for the various chapters, thus : Bondage Chapter (1) ; Bulrush Chapter (2) ; Burning Bush Chapter (3) ; Moses's Rod Chapter (4) ; Pharaoh's Hardness Chapter (5) ; God's Goodness Chapter (6) ; and so on.

The fourteen verses making up this week's lesson cover seven suggestive points :

1. The great family circle of Jacob and Joseph (verses 1-5).

2. The passing away of Joseph and "all that generation" (6).

3. The amazing increase of Israel as a people (7).

4. The arising of a new dynasty, "which knew not Joseph" (8).

5. The new king's shrewd study of the significance of this alien people in their midst (9, 10).

6. The terrific affliction of the Israelites by the Egyptians (11, 13, 14).

7. The increasing enlargement of Israel under affliction, with Egypt's resulting fear (12).

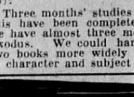
It seems like a strange, uncalled for, and disheartening contrast with the bright promises made by God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as to their descendants, that He was pledged to lavish upon their descendants, and the blessings that were going to come to all the families of the earth through them. But God makes no mistakes ; and we can see, now, why and how this was necessary. Egypt was necessary for Israel if she was to become the redeemer-nation of the world. She must know the real character of herself, and she could not know that if there were nothing to be redeemed from.

The servitude of the seventy members of the family of Jacob that were in Egypt, including Joseph, all died, but Israel did not die. Nor will Israel ever die. We have God's word for that ; so this peculiar people "were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty." In God's own good time—and that time may be at hand now—He will see that Israel multiplies again enormously, for the blessing to the whole world, which she alone can give.

The new king was shrewd enough to see the possible danger of Israel's presence in Egypt. But he was not shrewd enough to see the swidom of making this people his powerful friends. Those who set themselves against God and against God's people always make foolish blunders ; there's no wisdom that can oppose God. So Pharaoh's attempt to break down the people by persecution only built them up. They were made to serve with cruel severity ; their labors undoubtedly added to the splendour and glory of Egypt as a temporal power ; but Israel thrived under this treatment, even as our Lord assures His disciples they shall thrive, spiritually, at any rate, under persecution.

The increasing strength of Israel became an increasing grief to the Egyptians. The Rev. J. Russell Howden, of England, now writing on these lessons for Sunday School Times, makes an interesting comment on a word in the verse that tells us the Egyptians "were grieved because of the children of Israel." Mr. Howden says :

"The Hebrew verb (grieved) is a very expressive one. It means, literally, to be sick. Its secondary meanings include the ideas of being strangled and of fearing. Probably it signifies that the Egyptians were cramped and prevented them from spreading out their settlements into the extremely fruitful land of Goshen. And also that they were really afraid of the growing numbers and power of this hardier and purer race. Nothing makes people so cruel as fear."



Here are the facts

When 3 telephone orders can be taken in the time required for one order over the counter — as has been proven — and the amount of a telephone sale averages almost a third more, as it does, there can be any doubt in your mind that the merchant who uses the telephone consistently will win out over the rival who does not?

Can you afford to overlook the rapidly increasing importance of the telephone in your business for increasing sales and reducing the cost of selling?

Be open-minded. Try it — not spasmodically, but consistently, and judge for yourself.

Colors of Paints.

The color of paint is sometimes more than a matter of appearance. A black body more readily absorbs heat than a light body and in certain cases the light-colored paint seems to be preferable to the dark for this reason. Transcontinental burnouts in hot climates are reported to have been apparently due to the continuous high atmospheric temperatures. With this heat the further heating from the load has proved excessive and damage has resulted that might have been avoided with different painting.

Wine at a Launching.

When a war galley was launched by the Vikings men were bound to the rollers so that the keel was sprinkled with their blood. The practice of breaking a bottle of wine over a ship's stem at the launch is regarded as a survival of this savage Scandinavian practice or "reddening the rollers," as it was called, just as the custom of leading an officer's charger before the coffin at his funeral is a survival of the practice of sacrificing a chieftain's wives and horses at his pyre.

Metric Denominations.

The metric denominations and values for measures of capacity are as follows : Kilolitre or stere, 1,000 liters, equals one cubic meter ; hectoliter, ten liters, equals one-tenth of a cubic meter; dekoliter, ten liters, equals ten cubic decimeters; liter, equals one cubic decimeter; decliter, one-tenth of a liter, equals one-tenth of a cubic decimeter; centiliter, one one-hundredth of a liter, equals ten cubic centimeters; milliter, one one-thousandth of a liter, equals one cubic centimeter.

CURING HAY

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Hay, to be of the best quality, must be cut when the crop is at the right stage of maturity, and must then be cured in the best manner. Over-ripe hay loses a large percentage of leaf, and is of inferior feed value.

In general the principles of hay making are the same for all hay crops. The crop must be cut at a stage of maturity that will give the highest yield of nutrients per acre. After all the crop must not be permitted to ripen too far or the resultant feed will be woody, with a high percentage of wastage when fed.

In the making of clover hay, the best quality is obtained when the best quality is obtained when the crop is cut when in full bloom, or when the heads are just beginning to turn brown. It should be cut in the morning as soon as free from dew. It may be tedded or turned by hand, and then coiled in rather small but carefully made cocks, or cocks, in the evening. Hay of this type cures best under conditions which prevent very rapid drying of the leaves. If favourable weather obtains the hay may be taken in after several days, directly from the coil, although if help is available very fine hay results if the coils are shaken out several hours previous to hauling.

When a heavy rain has fallen on clover after it has been cut, the operation of curing becomes difficult. If very wet, and left in large coils, it will mildew ; if spread out in the hot sun, the leaves blacken and break off rapidly, leaving a stemmy hay. If the weather is fine following the rain, a fairly satisfactory method is to leave the coils undisturbed during the day. In the evening, if the weather appears settled, spread the coils sparingly and leave open all night. The hay may then be fit for drawing in the following day, or it may be necessary to coil for further curing.

Haul and store when the hay rustles nicely. The addition of one or two pounds of common salt per ton of hay as it is being stored, usually adds to the keeping quality and palatability.

Timothy hays and mixed hays should be cut when the seed is forming, or as most farmers say : "just after the second blossom falls." Cut in the morning after the dew is off, tedded or turned in the afternoon, and raked and coiled in large well made coils in the evening, it is frequently possible to take in hay of this type on the following day. Under favourable conditions one may dispense with the coiling, hauling directly from the windrow ; when this method is feasible, considerable labour is saved.

Under very favourable weather conditions, timothy and mixed hays are sometimes cut in the morning and stored away in the afternoon. There are arguments for and against such a practice. With hay cut at the proper state of maturity to ensure the greatest palatability, it is doubtful if it would keep properly in storage under such treatment. At a later stage, however, or with hay somewhat over-ripe, it is quite possible to follow such a practice successfully.

EFFECT OF BAD EGGS ON CONSUMPTION

Every time the consumer gets a bad egg or an egg of poor quality, the consumption of eggs in that consumer's household is apt to be lessened, says the Honourable W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, in a statement on the egg industry. He declares that many instances could be cited where customers had been lost and the sale of eggs curtailed on an entire market without the producer realizing why it has happened. Too often producers are not aware of the many causes that bring about deterioration in eggs. They are inclined to believe that because their eggs are newly gathered that they must be fresh and of good quality, forgetting that freshly gathered and freshly laid are not necessarily synonymous, and that stolen nests may contain fresh eggs and badly incubated eggs at the same gathering. Again, the kind of feed given to hens has a great effect on the eggs they produce. Clean feed and clean water result in high grade eggs, while the opposite is true when hens are obliged to pick up their living in the barnyard and drink barnyard water.

HANDLING THE STRAWBERRY PLANTATION

(Experimental Farms Note)

At this season of the year, every effort should be put forth to encourage the growth of the newly set strawberry plantation. Results obtained by the Horticultural Division of the Central Experimental Farm, (see report Horticulture Division, 1921) show conclusively the extreme importance of having young plants rooted at an early date. Endeavour to get a full stand of plants by the middle of September, and keep all new runners cut off. Each thrifty plant in a matted row should have at least 4 or 5 inches of space, to avoid overcrowding.

The early formation of the runners can be encouraged by the removal of the blossoms, by frequent cultivating and applications of a nitrogenous fertilizer if the soil is at all deficient in this element.

Further work with fertilizers in 1924-1925 has shown the importance of having a considerable amount of nitrogen available in September. At this season a large number of young plants are forming fruit buds for the next season's crop, and applications of nitrate of soda at this time encourage fruit bud development. In the plots nitrated at the rate of 300 lb. per acre in September, there was an increase of over 20% in crop, as compared with the check plots which did not receive any fertilizer, and an increase of over half that amount when compared with plots which received the nitrogen in the late spring.

As this appears to be a very critical time in the history of the plantation, growers would be well advised to consider the application of nitrate of soda in early September at the rate of about 200 lb. per acre.

GIVE YOUR NEW CAR A FAIR BREAK

BY ERWIN GREER
(President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago, Ill.

Watch yourself— before accepting that new car. Go over the body and equipment carefully. Is the body dented at any place ? Is the paint job perfect ? Should the paint be cracked at the places where the hood joins, it is ten to one that that crack will widen and creep out upon the cowl. When that happens nothing but a new paint job will make it look right again.

The crankcase is supposed to be full of oil. It is—often—and just as often—it isn't. You even assume that the oil is clean, when often it is gritty and dirty. Surely it is a small cost to have the crankcase filled under your personal supervision.

What ? You say all these things aren't necessary ? But they are, for the rush of production makes it almost impossible for the purchaser to go over the entire lubrication system. They are turning out cars like hot cakes these days, and if one worker in the production line is a little slow, why his particular job cannot possibly be done right.

John," for instance, is supposed to pack the steering assembly with grease. He does—most of the time—but perhaps on your car he got something in his eye and stopped to get it out. Naturally then your steering-gear housing is not fully packed with grease. But, watch yourself. It's your new car and that particular steering gear must operate perfectly within the ninety day guarantee and then go—bloozy ! That is merely an incident of what can happen to a brand new car.

It is an excellent plan to let a new car stand out in the rain all night, then let it dry naturally—just once, for this will bring out all the rust spots, resulting from improperly applied paint. The minute you spot these, either remove the iron screws and replace with brass ones, or paint them over with enamel. Do this and the ugly rust spots that start at the running board end of the fenders will be gone.

Note the ignition wires and where they will eventually chafe. Cover these with an added protection of tape and you won't be in for early electrical trouble. And the short cables which reach to the head lamps should be shellacked. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Above all, pay strict attention to the lubrication of every moving part the first five hundred miles. The ammeter, the oil-guage, in fact all dash instruments should always be watched.)

Do these things and you'll be away ahead of the repairman.

COUNTY COUNCIL

JUNE SESSION.

The Council met in the Council Chamber at 2 p.m., at the call of the Warden.

Warden Loyst occupied the chair.

Members all present.

Rev. M. Swayne, of Bath, opened the meeting with prayer.

The minutes of the last day of the last session were read and approved.

An Order-in-Council, approving of By-law No. 470, was read and approved; also an Order-in-Council approving of By-law No. 505 in part, was read and approved.

Mr. Young presented the first report of the Finance Committee, which was read, and after full discussion, adopted.

The motion was passed that the County pay to the House of Providence for the care of the county poor the sum of $4.50 per week from January 1st, 1926.

The balance of the session was occupied with the discussion of ways and means of raising moneys for County Road expenditures.

Council adjourned.

Wednesday

The balance of account of House of Providence, for quarter ending March 31st, $202.62, was on motion ordered paid.

A petition from J. F. Smith and other ratepayers of School Section No. 15, of the Township of North Fredericksburgh, praying against By-law No. 6 of the Township, which divided the School Section into two parts, was read.

A communication from the County Solicitor, explaining the law for the appointment of arbitrators in finances like the above, and enclosing a draft By-law, was also read.

A communication from County Judge J. E. Madden, as one of the Arbitrators appointed by Mr. W. P. Deroche, Clerk of the County Court, for the County of Lennox and Addington, in his stead, was read.

Mr. Reeve presented a By-law to appoint a Board of Arbitrators, which was read the first time.

The By-law was then read a second time, with the names of W. P. Deroche, Clerk of the County Court for Lennox and Addington; E. J. Corkill, P.S.I.; Jacob Reeve, Reeve of the Village of Newburgh; James Fisher, Reeve of the Township of Camden, and Samuel Miller, Reeve of Amherst Island, as the Board of Arbitrators.

The By-law was given its third reading and finally passed.

On motion of Councillors Mellow and A. C. Miller, the equalization of assessments for the County was fixed at the same amounts as last year.

Mr. Aylesworth presented his report as a delegate of the Ontario Educational Association, which was read, and on motion adopted.

On motion Mr. Aylesworth was paid the sum of $35.00 to cover his expenses of the meeting.

The report of Mr. M. R. Reid, P.S.I. was read, and on motion ordered printed into the Minutes.

The Council then adjourned for the benefit of Committees.

Thursday

Mr. J. A. Laughland, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, addressed the Council on Rural School Fairs, and other matters in connection with his office.

The Adams grader, recently purchased by the County, was in use on the Loyst and Bridges roads, adjacent to the town, and the County Council adjourned until 1.30 p.m., in order that the members could go and see the grader in action.

The Council resumed, with Mr. Johnson in the chair.

The By-law relating to the appointment of a Board of Arbitrators, re S. S. No. 15, North Fredericksburgh, was on motion read the third time, signed by the Warden and Clerk, and finally passed.

A communication from J. A. Laughland, Agricultural Representative, asking for the payment to be made to Rural School Fairs, was read, and an order passed making the usual grant.

An account of James Reid, Kingston, for $50.00, in connection with the death of Allan Lucas, was on motion ordered to be paid.

A deputation from the County of Hastings, consisting of Treasurer Haggerty, County Road Superintendent Rice, and Councillor Moore, waited upon the Council, in reference to the adjustment of accounts for expenditure on the boundary roads between the County of Hastings and Lennox and Addington.

After discussing the matter thoroughly, it was moved and seconded that the County of Hastings be paid $233.00 to balance said accounts.

Mr. J. M. Simpson and George Loyst appeared before the County Council in reference to the Loyst claim for damages, and on motion the claim of Mr. Loyst was referred to the County Roads and Bridges Committee to settle.

On motion, Mr. Andy Pringle, of Kaladar, was paid $9.00 for wolf destruction.

"With Mr. Rogers in the chair, it was moved by Mr. Samuel Miller, and seconded by Mr. Campbell that whereas the Council of the County of Lennox and Addington have adopted a new system of County Roads in accordance with the Public Highways Act as revised and amended, Ontario Statutes, 1926, Chapter 15, and whereas Section 13, Sub-section 2 and 3, of the above legislation, do provide that only municipalities that have County Roads will be entitled to expenditure of County Road moneys on their roads, and whereas Amherst Island, Denbigh, Abinger and Ashby, and Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham have not as yet a sufficient mileage of County Roads, and whereas the above mentioned Section 13, Sub-section 2, provides that where a municipality within the County on account of its remoteness from the roads included in the County Road System it is found inequitable that the County Rate for Roads be levied on such municipalities, the Minister may approve of the exemption of such municipalities. Therefore, be it resolved that the Minister of Public Works and Highways be requested to approve of the By-law to exempt the above mentioned municipalities by fixing the amount they should be assessed for County Road purposes as follows :

Denbigh, Abinger and Ashby, Amherst Island, and Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham be assessed 2 mills for County Road purposes. The proposed rate for County Road purposes for this year being 9 mills. Carried.

Friday

Moved by Mr. McCutcheon, seconded by Mr. Clark, that a by-law be drawn, adding the road from the Belleville County Road south, between the County of Lennox and Addington and County of Hastings, to the County Provincial Highway, for the opening thereof, and that the By-law of the County of Hastings as the Boundary County Road running across lots in Concession 2 and 3 in the Township of Richmond. Lost.

Mr. Johnson asked for the yeas and nays.

Yeas—Messrs. Aylesworth, Clark, Cousins, Fisher, McCutcheon, S. Miller—6.

Nays—Messrs. Campbell, Garrison, Johnson, Loyst, Mellow, A. Miller, Young—7.

Mr. Harry Garrison was heard on Mr. George Loyst's claim for damages.

Moved by Mr. Miller, seconded by Mr. Johnson, that the claim of Mr. Loyst, which was yesterday referred to the Roads and Bridges Committee, be dealt with in open council. Carried.

On motion, Mr. George Loyst was paid $43.00 in full settlement of his claim.

On motion, the following were appointed members of the local Mothers' Allowance Board, from 1st October, 1926, to 1st October, 1927 :—Warden W. C. Loyst, Clerk W. G. Wilson, and Mrs. Jean Swayne, Bath. Carried.

A petition from the ratepayers of the Township of Sheffield, in the vicinity of Erinsville, asking that the County Roads passing through that village be taken over and referred to the County Roads Committee.

On motion, Road Superintendent T. V. Anderson was allowed to pay for clerical assistance, in connection with County Road accounts, and bookkeeping assistance for Mr. W. J. Shannon, Treasurer, the sum not to exceed $600.00 for the year.

Moved by Mr. Graham, seconded by Mr. Cousins, that the County continue to raise all County Road money, as well as money necessary to pay the cost of the Provincial Highway levy as before. Carried.

Mr. Aylesworth asked for the yeas and nays.

Yeas—Messrs. Campbell, Cousins, Fisher, Graham, Johnson, Loyst, S. Miller, A. C. Miller, Mellow—9.

Nays—Messrs. Aylesworth, Garrison, McCutcheon, Young—4.

Moved by Mr. Aylesworth, seconded by Mr. McCutcheon, that this Council record its deep sorrow at the decease of James Reid, who more than forty years ago became a member of the Municipal Council of the Township of Camden, and from that Township was sent to this County Council, where he rendered years of good service, and over which he presided as Warden during 1887. For fifteen years he was the elected representative of the Riding of Addington in the Ontario Legislature, and afterwards, for some years, he was Registrar of Deeds for the County in those days the duties of his office were discharged by the Deputy Registrar, Mr. Reid's family.

Mr. Young presented a second report of the Finance Committee, which was read, and on motion adopted.

Moved by Mr. Johnson, seconded by Mr. Campbell, that a bin, now at Yesper Falls, be purchased by the County, for County Road purposes. Also that the committee services in connection therewith be paid.

A report of the Education Committee was presented and adopted.

A communication from Mr. W. P. Deroche, asking that extra vault space be provided for his office, was read, and referred to the County Property Committee.

A communication from Mr. W. D. Mildmer, in reference to a detour on Millhaven bridge, was read and filed.

A motion by Mr. Fisher, seconded by Mr. Johnson, that the County collect 50 per cent of the account paid Kingston General Hospital from the local municipalities, was lost.

A communication from S. S. Corbett, Kingston, asking for an increase of grant for financial expenses in connection with burial from Home for the Aged, was read, and on motion the grant was increased from $25.00 to $30.00.

On motion the following road was added to the County Road System, and a by-law presented to be passed and submitted to the Department of Public Highways for approval. The road starting on the western edge of Stella, in the Township of Amherst Island, and running south on the west side of Lot No. 1 of the Presbyterian Church, about 1¼ miles, to connect with County Road No. 7.

Saturday

Councillor Clark stated that had he been present on Friday, he would have voted yes on the resolution of Messrs. Graham and Cousins, relating to the County Road.

Mr. Cousins presented a report of the County Property Committee, which was read and adopted.

A by-law in reference to adding the small section of road in Amherst Island to the County Road System, was put through its various stages, and finally passed.

The matter of County granting a proportion of the cost of printing a booklet advertising the advantages of the County was laid on the table until the Fall session.

Council adjourned.

Ship's Church

The liner's siren breaks suddenly upon the Sabbath calm. It is that same siren which, in the dank fogs and blinding snowstorms of winter, amidst the sweltering heat-mists of the Gulf Stream in summer, blares a warning to other craft as the ship rushes through the ocean. But now its call has no hint of danger. It is summoning the passengers to church.

Its voice dies to give place to the bell on the bridge, the sleepy chimes of which, sending their echoes into the void of the ocean, seem to bear a reminder of church-going in some quiet glen. Indeed, when we see the congregation, Bibles and prayer-books under arm, make their way along the decks to devotion, it requires an effort to remind us that we are really on shipboard, and that a thousand miles or more divide us from land. It is hard to realise, too, that only the previous Sunday these same people were praying in the great churches of London, or Paris, or, it may be, New York.

Church is held on Sunday in every ship afloat. In a great liner there may be as many as three services for different denominations, in the course of a morning. The principal service, that of the Church of England, is usually taken by the captain himself, except in the case of storm, when he is unwilling to leave the bridge. Then the purser officiates. It is more picturesque and impressive, however, to have the captain and his principal officers present.

The service is held, perhaps, in the ball-room, with its glitter and gold, where only a few hours before the passengers danced to the syncopation of a jazz band. But that does not detract from the solemnity of the occasion. In fact, the very unconventionality of the "meeting place" reminds us that religion and worship depend not upon the edifice but upon the faith. The chairs are arranged in rows before the pulpit, which is covered with the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, the latter out of courtesy to the many Americans on board.

In one corner is the orchestra, the same that played popular dance music the previous night. Ship's church is complete even to the juvenile choir, whose chubby, smiling faces we recognize as those of the bell-boys of weekdays.

The worshippers come one by one, ushered to their seats by the sidesmen, who, on other days, are the lounge waiters. Then, as if at a given signal, there is silence. The captain! The worshippers stand as he makes his appearance, a well-groomed old sea-dog, who has fought many a battle with the elements in all the waters of the world, and will live to fight many more. His contact with the mysterious ocean has tinged his character with a strong religious fervor.

The service begins with a few words of prayer in the captain's sonorous voice, then the congregation shuffle for the "place" in their hymn-books and the wail of the violin fills the ball-room with the strains of "Fight the Good Fight."

It is the purser who reads the lesson, and we can compare his style with the captain's. The "old man" is unbending in attitude, his simple seriousness eloquent of a sailor's faith, his voice clear and resonant. The purser is more quiet of speech, yet none the less effective. Both, indeed, carry out their functions with unassumed naturalness.

There is no sermon, the proceedings following the order as laid down in the prayer-book. The captain offers up a supplication for the King, and the President of the United States, then comes the most eloquent prayer of all—"Bring us in safety to our desired haven." The words are echoed in every heart and by every lip, for the sound of the sea is in the worshippers' ears to remind them that they are still held at the mercy of nature, whose mighty hurricanes can make even this giant of a vessel seem like a cockleshell.

The sidesmen appear with the collection plates. There is a rustle of notes. Such congregations, on shipboard in the Atlantic, are as wealthy as any in the world, usually including half a dozen millionaires on pleasure or business bent. So, while the bell-boy gives his threepenny-piece, the man of wealth standing next to him may contribute £50. The collection thus often amounts to many hundreds of pounds for a single morning service.

There is one more hymn, a blessing, and ship's church is over. It has been a simple service, inspired by quiet piety, which makes the whimpering forget the surprising surroundings and creates an atmosphere not unlike that of a humble village kirk in the Highlands.

An Economical Wife.

"A friend of mine," says a clever needlewoman, "had occasion to open my shirtwaist box the other day. She came to me, saying, 'My, but you are extravagant! You have eleven pretty silk waists in that one box. How did you happen to buy so much wash silk?' I answered her that my husband works in a bank and must wear clean linen. He is partial to silk shirts, but as soon as there is the least break near the collar they are thrown away.

"Shortly afterward I appear in a new silk waist, for the rest of the shirt is perfectly good. He is a large man, and there is not the least trouble in getting the waist from the shirt. Sometimes I vary them by putting on a plain collar and cuffs.

"You will find that when using this idea you do not mind at all how many new shirts the man of the house chooses to buy. You will even suggest at times that a certain shirt in the window would look well on him—and incidentally, on you."

Dog Hero of Austerlitz.

In the annals of the French army Mustache is still a celebrity. Mustache was one of the dogs used in the Italian campaign when Napoleon was first consul. He saved the French army from a night surprise and annihilation. Later he tracked and captured a spy who had secured valuable information.

But this dog's crowning achievement was at the battle of Austerlitz. The standard bearer of the regiment had just fallen dead. Mustache's teeth and an Austrian soldier's hand grasped the tattered banner simultaneously. Mustache flew at his enemy's throat and bore him down. Then, seizing the flag, he carried it back to the regiment.

Napoleon gave Mustache the highest decoration for his valor. He met a soldier's death not long after this, racing forward beside the flag, leading the regiment in a furious charge.

Curious Street Names.

The list of curious street names is inexhaustible. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden ironically enough in the slums of the east end.

But for really bizarre street names one should go to Brussels. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Woman and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, considerably narrower than Whitehall. But the cream of Brussels street names surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Coconut. This in the original appears as one ponderous thirty-six letter word. —London Chronicle.

An Artist's Struggles.

Professor von Herkomer, the famous painter, had such a struggle to gain a living in his early days that had it not been for his inexhaustible stock of patience and courage the world would probably have abandoned art entirely. He sold his first picture for 2 guineas and later on earned for a short time a couple of pounds weekly for a woodcut which he supplied to a weekly paper. This modest salary coming to a stop, he was at his wits' end to know what to do. He applied to a troupe of minstrels for an engagement as either player, but in vain, and then took to designing carpets. For some years he battled with poverty, achieving no success until he obtained employment on a weekly illustrated journal.—London Globe.

Ownership of Deserts.

The national government virtually owns all our deserts, although in Texas the state owns all the public lands. It is probable that eventually the desert lands will pass from public ownership into the hands of private owners by reduction of areas, the size of which will be relative to their productiveness. For it must be realized that whereas in a well watered region five acres may be enough to support a family, anywhere from 500 to 10,000 acres may be needed to support a family in the desert. It is all a matter of water supply, for water is primarily the basis of land values and rents, as it is the prime means of subsistence of all living things, whether plants or animals.—

An Old London Paper.

On Sept. 5, 1666, a special number of the London Gazette was issued, the reason being, as described in the first paragraph: "The ordinary course of this paper having been interrupted by a sad and lamentable accident of fire lately happened in the city of London, it hath been thought fit for satisfying the minds of so many of his majestie's good subjects, who must needs be concerned for the issue of so great an accident, to give this short, but true, account of it."

The first number had been published on Nov. 14, 1665, when the court was at Oxford on account of the plague, and the paper was therefore called at first the Oxford Gazette. With its twenty-fourth number, however, it became the London Gazette, by which name it has been known ever since.

Boys and Playgrounds.

I do not know of any better way to teach a boy to be honorable and straight than to give him a chance to play with his comrades, says Justice Hughes. In the playground he learns because he does not want anybody else to cheat him, and he is "down" on the boy that does not play fair; he will establish standards of conduct which we must maintain in the community and particularly in our boys' games. If there is one thing that we need more than another it is the constant emphasis among our citizens of that spirit of fair play, that willingness to give and take, that generosity in defeat and that lack of assertiveness in victory which we identify with true sport and which is learned best of all in childhood upon the playground.

A Singular Marriage Custom.

The Kurds have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marrige custom, which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, carries his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and is desperately assailed the whole way by a number of girls. Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who in the coming home with his bride can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the brute amazons often inflict on him marks which he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to avenge slighted love.

Masked Musicians.

The Shakuhachi players of Japan are a privileged class of itinerant musicians. Their instrument, a kind of reed oboe, enjoys what is perhaps a unique distinction, it having been adopted as a unit of measurement, a sixth of a sen, or about two feet. A peculiar headdress, something like an immense peach basket hat, serves as a cool variety of mask, permitting the wearer to see without being seen—a decided advantage to such people as have come down in the world and are undesirous of publicity. It also serves as a further distinctive feature of this class of musician to those who do not read the descriptive matter which is hung in front of each player.—Wide World.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks in Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.—London Telegraph.

The Difference.

Mrs. Dash—The idea of Mrs. Rash having society aspirations! Why, her father was a peddler! Mr. Dash—Yes, she's entirely too proud. She ought to hang back until people have forgotten it. Now, in your case, my dear, it was your grandfather who was a peddler.

Libel.

Libel once meant any little book, but as many small tracts in the early days of printing were personal and offensive in character the word acquired its present significance.

The Skeptics.

Harvey's theory of the circulation of the blood was referred so ridiculous at the time of the discovery that for ten years not a single patient consulted him.

Beyond Him.

"I cawn't comprehend," said Cholly Tanspatts, "how it—aw—can be that the moon, doncherknow, makes the—aw—tides rise and fall—aw—when they rise and fall just the same when we—aw—have no moon, doncherknow, deah boy!"

PRETTY RUSSIAN GIRLS

LURE BRITISH HUSBANDS FROM WIVES.

Judge Says They Are More Real Vampires Than Those Seen In the Movies — War Between Women Makes Men Feel Appreciated as Lords.

With no fortune but their faces pretty Russian refugees have lured many British husbands from their wives and broken up many happy British homes in the English settlement of Shanghai, China, says a despatch.

British wives declare that these fascinating rivals from southwest Russia and Siberia, some of them princesses, many of them aristocrats, have enticed their husbands away and English girls with dances in the Far East assert that the fair Russians are causing their betrothed husbands to break their engagements.

An English judge in the Shanghai Settlement Court makes the unequivocal statement that most of the divorces he tried recently were almost entirely due to the fascinations of the Russian refugees, who are characterized as real vampires of the kind made famous on the films. The judge's statement has let loose a flood of letters from indignant British and American wives on the one hand, and from protesting Russian women on the other, which appear in the English newspapers of China. The British wives attack the morals of the Russians, and demand their expulsion from China. The Russians retort by describing the British wives as flat-chested and flat-footed, and worn out by hunting, hockey and golf. The Russian women refugees, in fact, are presenting another Far Eastern problem in China that no one seems able to solve.

The refugees are unable to find employment as typists and school teachers, the only avenues open to white women in China, owing to their ignorance of the English language. Many of them, owing to their good looks and attractive appearance, secured employment as singers, exhibition dancers, and dancing partners in the restaurants and elsewhere.

There is always a scarcity of white women in the Far East, and the alluring Russians quickly attracted young English bachelors who had arrived in China under the three-year business contracts, which provided that they should remain unmarried until the contracts were renewed. Older men, husbands and fathers who had sent their families back to Britain or the United States, later came under the spell of the fascinating Russians.

Following are typical extracts from some of the letters published in the Chinese English Press:—

From an American wife.—"I sympathize with these Russian women refugees, but it is not the sort of sympathy that will let any of them take my husband, who brought me away from ... my own people to my country. This is a fair warning meant for my husband as well as that fascinating lady friend."

From an American who married a Russian refugee.—"There seems to be little question that the Russian woman is by far a 'better fellow' than the average woman from other countries. The Russian girl is not mercenary; her tactics show a man that he must exert himself if he wishes to hold her interest, and this arouses the hunter's instinct in him. She is also brought up to be interesting; she fits in with her husband's affairs as well as his moods. It is for this reason that he finds in her a friend, a sweetheart, and a wife."

From a Briton who married a Russian.—"The plain truth of the matter is that many men out here are faced with the alternatives of going home to be married, which is prohibitive in cost, or marrying a Russian. The influx of Russian women to the Far East has been a godsend."

From a Russian girl refugee in China.—"I wish to defend my Russian refugee sisters and to inform other women that they are afraid to call a spade a spade. We Russians have not the flat chest, the flat feet. We are not the 'Good-fellow-how-much-you-got' kind. We do not take to golf, tennis or hockey or golf and get so tired we can do nothing."

The men, meanwhile, with the women fighting over them, feel they are appreciated at last.

Warmth by Wireless.

That it is no more improbable to broadcast heat waves than it is to broadcast sound waves is the view of Prof. S. B. Dibble, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. But, he points out, research work must be done to discover instruments capable of controlling heat waves, and a detector that will anticipate the waves, hold them, and amplify them.

It is known that heat travels through space and through solids, says Prof. Dibble, and when once we learn how to pick up these waves and control them, heating throughout the world will be revolutionized. But broadcasting will mean better health to the public, because it may remove from the air the irritants of modern heat-making systems.

The Island of Campobello.

Campobello Island, nine-tenths of a mile in length and two-thirds of a mile in width, lies between Passamaquoddy Bay and the Bay of Fundy, just on the Canadian (New Brunswick) side of the International Boundary separating New Brunswick from the State of Maine. It is irregular in shape, and its shores abound in picturesque cliffs, channels and beaches. The interior is covered with a dense growth of firs and birches, affording a pleasant shade for the numerous walks and drives that have been made through it in all directions. The climate is cool in summer, ranging from 50 to 75 degrees Fahrenheit. From 1767 to 1880 the island belonged to William Owen and his descendants, but in the latter year it was purchased by a syndicate of Boston and New York capitalists, who have spent a large sum on its development, and later it became a summer resort. The resident inhabitants number about 1,000, and the island forms a township of Charlotte County, New Brunswick.

Athleticism in the East.

The general athletic awakening is perhaps the most important effect that our occupation of the Philippines has had upon the far East." Just as the old Olympic games, begun by one village, grew to be the great recurring event at which all the Hellenic peoples could meet in peaceful competition, so this modern athletic movement starting from Bagnio has spread to other far eastern peoples, and has given them notionly a ground for friendly meeting, but also a basis for genuine respect and mutual understanding.

Farmhouses Modernized.

As farmhouses become adapted to the taste of the women who are, in so many cases, taking over their management, it is found that many of the old institutions of the farmhouse—the parlor, the many small rooms, the dark halls—are disappearing. Partitions are torn out to make spacious living rooms; porches are added, and sometimes sunrooms; the utmost convenience of the housekeeper who is also tender of the fields.—Exchange.

Nero's Golden Palace.

The golden house was the palace of Nero in ancient Rome, which occupied the valley between the Palatine and Esquiline, and connected the palaces of the Caesars with the gardens of Maecenas. It was built after the great fire of 64 A. D., and was so large that it contained porticoes 2,800 feet long and inclosed a lake where the colosseum now stands. The forecourt contained a colossus of Nero 120 feet high.

German Title of Honor.

"Von" before a name in German denotes a privilege title, either inherited or bestowed by a monarch upon his subject for meritorious services. While formerly this title was found in military or feudal families only, many commoners, captains of industry, scientists, financiers and artists were so honored by their monarchs. The title is either hereditary or ceases with the death of the distinguished person.

Overcoming Obstacles.

Sir George Reid's golden rule for the attainment of old age: "I have aimed at health and happiness, and when confronted by a formidable obstacle I have first tried to knock it over, failing that, to get around it; if not, then under it; and if all these maneuvers failed I have been content to lie down in its grateful shade, lauding it as a beautiful blessing in disguise."

Paymaster for the Party.

As an inducement to Cecil, aged four, to attend Sunday school regularly, said time, she was allowed to carry the pennies to be put into the collection envelope. When the class monitor came around the teacher and the rest of the class were very much amused to hear Cecil say in her dignified tones, "Here, girls, I will pay the fares."

No Time for That.

Kathryn came running to her mother, crying as though her heart would break. Between sobs she said that a dog had frightened her. Her mother, trying to divert her attention, said, "What kind of a tall did the dog have?" Kathryn sobbed. "Do you s'pose I stopped to look at his tail?"

Valuable New Metal.

A white metal, which takes a brilliant polish and holds it on exposure to the atmosphere, and claimed to be possessed by an alloy of bismuth, mercury, tin, zinc and copper, has been covered by a patent.

Water Regulated by Pedal.

Pressing one end of a pedal with the foot admits cold water to a new washstand, pressing the other end allows hot water to flow and pressing the centre pedal mixes the two so that moderately warm water is obtained.

Felt Need of Change.

Charles was staying in the country where playmates were few. So long as it was Hobson's choice he amused himself with a little neighbor girl some years younger than himself, but on being invited to play with an older girl well supplied with toys, he entirely abandoned his former playmate regardless of all her attempts to lure him back. On being remonstrated with by his mother for his neglect of Julia he disgustedly remarked, "Oh, mother, I'll go back to Julia some day, but a fellow sometimes wants a change."

Biblical Town of Gaza.

Al-Minnar, or the watchtower, still exists to the east of the town of Gaza. It is where Samson is said to have carried the gates of the city. On the road from Gaza to Jaffa are ancient olive trees, many of them more than one thousand years old, with gnarled bark and immense trunks. There is an old legend which credits Gaza with the invention of the first mechanical clocks. These were perhaps the sand clocks which are still used in some mosques.

Little Things Cause Sunshine.

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams that are bright all the time. To give up something, when giving up will prevent unhappiness; to yield, when persisting will chafe and fret others; to go a little around rather than come against another; to take an ill look or a cross word quietly, rather than resent or return it—these are the ways in which clouds and storms are kept off, and a pleasant and steady sunshine secured.—Aikin.

Trials All Have Value.

Trials without discover forces within. Says Victor Hugo: "There are instincts for all the crises of life." A deep perplexity awakens a flash of insight; a bitter opposition sets the soul on fire; a grave peril opens our eyes to horses and chariots of fire; a severe catastrophe evokes a heroism of which the sufferer had not thought himself capable.—W. L. Watkinson.

Be Kind Always.

One great trouble with unkind thoughts is that it is so very difficult to keep them only thoughts; sooner or later they find utterance. We may fancy that we are keeping our uncharitable opinions to ourselves, but they are almost certain to express themselves in look or tone, if not in word. The only way to be really kind is to be kind clear through.—Exchange.

Original "Gag Rule."

"Gag rule" was a phrase applied to a resolution passed by congress in May, 1836, that three-fourths of all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating in any way to the subject of slavery or the abolition of slavery should lie on the table without being printed or referred. The rule was abolished a few years later.

Mexican Sacrificial Stone.

The sacrificial stone was the stone on which human victims were sacrificed before the war god Huitzilopochtli, in the principal Aztec temple in Mexico It was dug up near the site of the temple in 1791, and is now in the Mexican national museum. The stone is disk shaped. 8 3-5 feet in diameter and 2½ feet thick. The sides are covered with elaborate sculptures.

Be Kind and Patient.

There is more special grace requisite and manifest in watchful perseverance little kindnesses, and habitual patience at home, in abstinence from conversational disparagement of others, and in resistance to habits of sloth and undue self-indulgence in private life than in the performance of great public duties under the observation of multitudes.

Remembered Mother's Answer.

Little Harry one day asked his mother who made the trees and was told that God made them. A few days later an old colored man came to trim the trees and the little fellow, seeing him at work, ran to his mother and exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, God's out in the yard repairing his trees!"

Unreasonable.

Several boys were holding a conference on the street corner. One boy kept correcting another's mistakes in English until the offender suddenly squared himself before his critic and demanded, "Gee whiz! what is vacation for if a feller has to talk proper all the time?"

On a Commercial Basis.

Gerald gave his grandmother a little gift for her birthday, and she said: "Well, you are a good lad; I shall give you a nickel for yourself," to which the little chap replied, "But, grandma, the present cost 15 cents."

All a Dream.

There is an amusing example of oriental subtlety in an anecdote that Mr. Sidney Whitman tells in "Turkish Memories." The story is of a young diplomat who was sent to Constantinople to be trained for his profession.

One day the diplomat met a carriage guarded by a eunuch that contained some ladies of the sultan's harem. The young man endeavored to peep in at the window and got a blow across the face from the vigilant eunuch. He made a great uproar and lodged a complaint with the sultan himself. He was received in private audience, and Abdul Hamid listened patiently to his story of the outrage.

On its conclusion the sultan replied: "My dear sir, I have gone carefully into the case and see exactly how it stands. You are a gentleman; therefore you could never have committed such a breach of good manners as is alleged to have taken place, and consequently no eunuch could possibly have presumed to strike you. The whole affair must be the product of your fancy; pray let us dismiss it."

Vanity Tickled.

During the early excesses of the French revolution a noble lady of the world was driving in the streets of Paris. Lafayette appeared and ordered a young artillery officer to open fire upon them with two cannon. The officer begged the general to let him try first to persuade them to withdraw.

"It is useless to appeal to their reason," said the general.

"Certainly," answered the officer, "and it is not to their reason, but to their vanity, I would appeal."

The officer rode up to the front of the mob, doffed his cocked hat, pointed to the guns and said:

"Gentlemen will have the kindness to retire, for I am ordered to shoot down the rabble."

The street was cleared at once, for none could brook the idea of being come classed with the scum of the city.

The Eternal Conflict.

Society is nothing more than a continuation of the conflict of nature under the guidance of intelligence. It is vain to hope for any amelioration of society from the prevalence of an intellectual education. Culture of the intellect supplies new weapons for use in the conflict and may render it less rude in appearance, but cannot change its nature. * * * Doctrines and creeds are forms; the will supplies their contents. Just as a vehicle may convey substances having wholesome or injurious or indifferent properties, so any system of thinking—theological, social or political—may be made to bear any purport, good or bad. To try to shape opinions so that they may not be made subservient to any evil purpose is all labor in vain.—Schopenhauer.

Wars and Words.

The wars with Spain in the sixteenth century enriched the English language with many of its words, and, as Logan Pearsall Smith has pointed out, "we owe the Spanish words 'embargo' and 'contraband' and the Dutch word 'freebooter.' Among other Dutch or Flemish words, perhaps, we may include brought back to England by soldiers in their campaign in the low countries may be mentioned 'furlough,' 'cashiered,' 'to domineer,' 'onslaught,' 'drill' and 'doguieer.' 'Comrade' is a Spanish word, but seems to have been a soldiers' term learned in the low countries, and 'forlorn hope' is a military phrase, from the Dutch 'verloren hoop,' in which 'hoop' means a troop and is cognate with our word 'heap.'"—London Chronicle.

Didn't Raise Them.

A young housewife who lives in a suburban town went to the village store to make some purchases.

"These chickens look very nice," remarked the customer. "How much are they?"

"One dollar apiece, madam," was the prompt response of the obliging proprietor. "You can't find better poultry for the money in the whole country."

"One dollar," thoughtfully mused the customer, and then added: "Did you raise them?"

"Oh, no, madam!" was the hasty assurance of the misunderstanding storekeeper. "That is the same price I offered to sell them for yesterday."—

A Graceful Compliment.

Some famous compliments have been paid to members of the sterner sex, and one of the most gracefully turned was that uttered by Bossuet who, when the virtuous De Mesmes, president of the parliament of Paris, was elected an academician, congratulated him in these terms: "I have come to you, sir, in order that you may congratulate me on having you one of my fellow academicians."

Moslem Wives.

Under the Moslem laws the provision for securing to the wife the free and uncontrolled possession of her property is minutely stipulated in the marriage contract. A suitable sum is also arranged for her maintenance in accordance with her husband's rank.

PERSONAL SAFETY

Industrial safety, or the better and more expressive term "personal safety," in the main is just the difference between afterthought and forethought. The phrases "Take a chance" and "Try anything once" are especially foolish when human life and limb are the issues at stake. The train and the motor car have met too often at crossings. The inexperienced boatman has found the water too deep and the chance-taking industrial worker has found out many times that serious injury is the penalty for placing false value on foolish heroics or grandstand plays.
The known accident record of the Province of Ontario is that one out of every ten industrial workers reports injury once during each year to the Workmen's Compensation Board, with every reason to believe at least seventy-five per cent. of these so-called accidents are avoidable when care is exercised. The mutilated hands of machine operators, the strains, bruises and contusions of other industrial workers, the blind and partially blind workers' sound ample warning to the careless or thoughtless. Quite true, chance takers may enjoy immunity for even an extended time, but the law of averages holds true and no regret or afterthought can restore life or limb, nor atone for suffering and sorrow.
That self-inflicted injury does not enter into the situation is obvious, but there is no good reason for so many accidents occurring through failure to exercise common sense. When warned of danger by others it is well to remember the good intentions and appreciate the great possibility of some bitter lesson learned at great cost.
Safety is of general interest but only when we appreciate the vital individual interest to each one, young or old, and exercise individual care, can we expect to enjoy reasonable immunity from accidents.

Woman Killed on Crossing.
Mrs. John Donnan, of Smithfield, was instantly killed, Mrs. Whitney received a broken leg, Mrs. William Woodcock received cuts and bruises and the driver of the car, Mr. W. Woodcock had three ribs cracked, when the motor in which they were riding was struck by a freight train on the crossing just west of the station at Smithfield on Thursday night. Mrs. Whitney was taken to Belleville General Hospital and the other injured occupants of the car were taken to their homes.
The party were coming home from a visit late Thursday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock driving in the front seat and Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. Donnan in the back. They were proceeding to their home in Smithfield, a small village, about four miles east of Brighton. Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock are former well-known residents of Napanee.

Death at Flinton.
A rare and beautiful life closed on earth when Belle Stuart Bryden, beloved wife of T. J. G. Tindle, M.D., of Flinton, fell asleep on Friday, June 11th. Mrs. Tindle was the daughter of the late Mr. James Bryden and Mrs. Bryden. Born near Flinton she spent practically her whole life in that neighborhood. Her twenty years of married life were singularly happy ones. She was always a member of the Methodist (now United) church and took a keen interest in everything in connection with the church and its activities. Of late years, through illness, she was often unable to attend the regular services, but was kept fully informed and was always interested in every need, displaying an intelligent judgment, and tender sympathy with all church life. But it was in her home that she will be remembered best. She was always the perfect hostess, unostentatious, careful and considerate for her guests. The writer has many times found rest and uplift in that quiet home. Fond of books, and having a cultured literary taste, she was, in consequence, a delightful conversationalist, and she displayed on many occasions, a rare sense of humor. She had a love, bordering on passion, for flowers, and took a keen delight in arranging many favorite hymns. About three months ago she was taken ill, and all through the long days which followed, she retained her wonderful optimism, planning for those she loved, showing in every word and action her thoughtfulness for others. Her religious life was a very real thing. Intimate fellowship with God, and a noble parentage was also her heritage. Mrs. Tindle was a true help-mate and comrade, and counted her husband in many ways; her good judgment being an invaluable asset in the difficulties of a country practice. Her longing to see her mother, Mrs. James Bryden, of Manville, was granted, and for many weeks husband and mother, with untiring devotion, gave themselves over entirely to caring for her. The end came peacefully, a never-to-be-forgotten smile for her nearest and dearest, and then, her task on earth wel idone, she fell asleep. Another pearl taken from God's earthly string of jewels, and now re-set and shown to the Saviour's crown. One is happy to have known her, and one's life will be the richer for the memories associated with her. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon, June 14th, when a service was held at the home of the late Mrs. Tindle, followed by a public service at the United Church, Flinton. The great gathering that assembled showed in what esteem she was held. Rev. Thomas Wallace, who ministered on this circuit twenty years ago, and who has ever since been an intimate friend, also Rev. E. W. Cafley, her own pastor, paid fitting tributes to her worth. Rev. H. Bent, of Enterprise, was present and took part in the service. The hymns, anthems and duets sung were all favorites of Mrs. Tindle. It was also fitting that there should be so many beautiful floral tributes. Besides the sorrowing husband and mother, Mrs. Tindle leaves two sisters, Mrs. Neil MacKinnon, and Mrs. H. G. Bolsford, and one brother, John Bryden, all of Manville, Alta.

Farewell Services.
The farewell services of Rev. A. J. Terrill, who has been pastor of Grace Church for the past five years, were marked with large congregations both at the morning and evening services on Sunday. In the morning the pastor referred to the many friends and close associations he had made since coming to Napanee and referred very feelingly to the loyal support which he had received, not only from the Official Board, but also from the Presidents and assistants of the church's work. In the evening the services in Trinity and St. Andrew's Churches were withdrawn to enable the congregations of these churches to be present, to pay their tribute to one who has rendered faithful service in the community and whose association with the ministers and congregations of these churches have been most cordial. Rev. W. R. Tanton, of Trinity Church, and Rev. A. J. Wilson, of St. Andrew's Church, were present and assisted in the services.

ERNESTTOWN SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Township of Ernesttown held its Sunday School Convention in Wilton United Church on June 16th. At the afternoon session devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. G. C. R. McQuade. The township president, Mr. R. J. Brethen, was in the chair. Music was furnished by the Sunday School choir, assisted by the church choir, under the leadership of Mr. Robert Assestine. A vocal selection entitled "If I Were a Voice," was given by Rev. Roy Rickard, the provincial representative. Reports were given by the departmental officers showing a high record, reaching the standard of 85 credits for the township.
Mrs. A. MacGregor, Napanee county secretary-treasurer, gave a very interesting illustration of the smallest things in life. Through preseverance we can attain our highest ambition, as the grain of sand became a receptacle of the King's Palace. Rev. Roy Rickard, the provincial representative, then gave a very instructive address on "Worship in the Sunday School." A round table conference was conducted by the provincial representative, taking the chart as the subject of discussion. The afternoon session closed with prayer by Rev. Roy Rickard.
Supper was served the visiting delegates and a pleasant social hour was spent. At the evening service a song service was held by the Rev. Roy Rickard and the choir, followed by the devotional exercises by Rev. A. G. MacMillan. A selection was given by the choir and the report of the nominating committee followed. Installation of officers-elect was conducted by Rev. G. C. R. McQuade. A vocal selection "My Task" was rendered by Rev. Roy Rickard. Then an address on "The Nectar of Victory" by Rev. G. E. Ross, of Bath, was listened to with much appreciation. A collection was taken by the choir. The provincial representative gave an object lesson, taking as his subject "The Furrow of Life." God will be with us as we plough our furrow in this world in which we live.
The service was closed with prayer by Rev. G. E. Ross, bringing to a close a very successful and beneficial convention.

Monasteries.
The monasteries once thickly strewn throughout England and much of Europe were called abbeys, from being ruled by abbots—or abbats from abbas, Syrian for "father"—as those governed by a prior were called priories.

Speaking of Birds.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON NAPANEE STREET

On Wednesday, about noon, Winnie Galbraith, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Galbraith, Croydon, was instantly killed when struck by an automobile, driven by Ernest Wells, of Toronto. The accident occurred in front of Hooper's Drug Store, while the girl was crossing the street. The car was going to Kingston and the driver, who is a chaffeur, employed by Mr. Johnston, Dale Avenue, Toronto, was alone in the car. After crossing centre street the girl ran out from behind another car, right in front of the approaching car. The car was not running fast as testified to by a resident of the county, who followed it from the west end of the town and noticed that his speedometer registered eight miles an hour. The driver stopped the car within twelve feet, but the accident appeared unavoidable. An inquest was opened and adjourned until this (Tuesday) evening.

Rollicking Play, "Applesauce," Coming at the Chautauqua

"Applesauce," a feature dramatic offering of the coming Dominion Chautauqua, is a happy play with a message of cheerio, sunny skies and silver linings, from the pen of Barry Conners.

It is one of those synthetic concoctions of homely, simple virtues, sweet girlhood, gib young men and violent jerks at the heartstrings, well calculated to thrill and delight every member of the audience. It will be presented here by a fine cast of New York actors.

Introduction of Punctuation.

Most ancient languages were innocent of any system of punctuation. In the earliest known manuscripts preserving the original text of the New Testament, none of which are earlier than the third century, the letters are placed at equal distances apart, with no connecting link between, even in the matter of spacing, an arrangement which must have rendered reading at sight somewhat difficult. The present system of punctuation was introduced in the latter part of the fifteenth century by Aldus Manutius, a Venetian printer, who was responsible for the full stop, colon, semi-colon, comma, marks of interrogation and exclamation, parentheses and dash, hyphen, apostrophe and quotation marks. These were subsequently copied by other printers, until their use became universal.

Arsenal Cavemen.

An arsenal was discovered some months ago in the neighborhood of Chatham, England, believed to have been used by cavemen millions of years ago. Two local men made the discovery about sixteen months ago, and since then about four thousand hammer stones, flint axes and scrapers, and other worked flints, have been taken out of the dump. The tools and weapons, although they belong to the earliest period of the Stone Age, are wonderfully efficient. Some of the edges are still almost as keen as razors.

Heroism.

Heroism is always the same, however the fashion of a hero's clothes may alter. Every hero in history is no more a man as his neighbor, and if we should tell the simple truth of some of our neighbors, it would sound like poetry.—George W. Curtis.

Daily Thought.

Not Guilty.

Marcus Pickney had been arrested through the activities of his 200 pound Scotch wife, and the pair were facing the judge.

It seemed that Pickney was a shiftless, ne'er-do-well, lazy man, with a strong disinclination to honest toil. Moreover, he was in the habit of coming home "corned" and beating his thrifty better half. It was on the occasion of the last of these episodes that she had brought about his arrest.

After patiently hearing testimony the judge said:

"Mrs. Pickney, it seems to me that this is a case where prosecution is possible for consumption."

"Oh, your honor," wailed the excited woman, "they can't bring that up agin me! I've took to washin' and giv' him what you might say was fine livin' ever since we was marrit. No, he can't accuse me of that, judge."

World's Oldest Industry.

The pearl fisheries of Ceylon are said to be the oldest industry in the world. For over 3,000 years the pearl oyster harvest has been gathered by the natives, who, skilled in diving, have handed down the industry from one generation to the next. Pearl fishing in Ceylon today is somewhat of a speculation. The greatest care is taken lest when the shells of the bivalves are opened any of the precious gems be lost or stolen. A very strict watch is kept over the natives who are employed in this kind of work, but in spite of the greatest precautions some of the smaller stones are frequently concealed. The refuse from the shells is very carefully examined subsequent to this first examination. Even the dried dust of the oyster is carefully sifted.

Grazed in the Fog.

It is not unusual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "catted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit, but fortunately the chain parted just the moment the ship crashed into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

When to Bend Your Knees.

Here is a hint for you. In case you should happen to be caught in a falling elevator bend your knees. One day an elevator in a sixteen story building became disabled and fell from the seventh floor to the basement. There were seven passengers in the car. Alive to the danger, the car operators shouted: "The car is going to fall! Turn your backs to the door and bend your knees!" Six of the seven passengers obeyed and escaped injury, although the car landed with a crash that sounded all through the building. The seventh rider failed to obey the order and suffered fractures of the right thigh bone and of the right knee and lacerations, because he was facing the door and the broken glass showered upon him when the car struck.—New York Letter

Real Envy.

A considerable mingling of social classes occurs in our hill village, writes a correspondent, owing to the townfolk's practice of renting summer cottages in our midst and living there neighborly with the real working people for whom the places were built. In one such case the resident from town was an unmarried lady; the nearest cottager next door had a husband who, to put it mildly, was notoriously no blessing to her. Making a friendly call one day the wife was greatly impressed by the pleasant air of comfort and well being achieved in a cottage otherwise the duplicate of her own. She looked round with a mildly envious air and earnestly remarked, on a little sigh, "Ee, Miss X—, you ought to 'appy—no 'usband nor nothin'."—Manchester Guardian.

Absentminded Lord Derby.

Lord Derby could be very absentminded, and once on a time he walked with Lord Clarendon, his opponent, and told him all the secrets of the cabinet. Lord Clarendon listened amazed, but thought it too large an order when he was asked for his advice. It was not for him to counsel his political foes. At this intimation Lord Derby woke up, saying, "Really, I forgot at the time I was talking to a colleague!" He had continued, hardly recognizing the fact, a controversy he had been having with other ministers at the foreign office. Of course Lord Clarendon honorably preserved the cabinet secrets, but he told his story against Lord Derby and made a laugh.

"Hello!" she exclaimed. "What are you going to make?"

"Some cakes," replied the young wife proudly.

"But why have you got out those fashion papers, as well as the cookery books?"

"You see," confessed, Bella, rather shamefacedly, "I'm a bit of a novice at cooking. Tell me, do you make cakes from a recipe or a pattern?"—London Answers.

Empty Handed.

The afternoon at the new neighbor's had passed very pleasantly. James junior cried when told that it was time to go home.

"Never mind," said the lady consolingly. "You can come again."

"It ain't that," said James junior. "It's the way I'm going to get home from Henry. When I get home he'll say 'Halves,' and if I have to tell him that you didn't give me anything he will think I'm telling a story and punch my head for it."

Oiling the Wheels.

No one can afford to let another person exceed in politeness, and there is nothing in the world that will oil the wheels of life like the lubricant of courtesy. Try it in your daily life and see. No one will chide you for not being in good form, even if you should slip in a few obsolete terms. For in this busy age each one is an arbiter of fashion himself. It would be a refreshing thing to introduce a few of the old-fashioned variety of social amenities—at least it would be refreshing to the elders of some of the boys and girls of the period.

"Nemesis."

Nemesis was a goddess of justice and divine retribution. The word comes from a Greek verb meaning to deal out, distribute, dispense. In Greek mythology Nemesis was a goddess personifying allotment or the divine distribution to every man of his precise share of fortune, good and bad. It was her special function to see that the proper proportion of individual prosperity was preserved, and that anyone who became too prosperous or was too much uplifted by his prosperity should be reduced or punished.

Like to Be an Alligator?

Alligators have to be fed on meat, but they need no food from September 1 to May 1, for that is their hibernating season, when they do not eat at all. Alligator skins are used for making bags, suitcases, purses, belts, cushion covers, etc., and the teeth and bones are made into fancy knife, pocket knives, whistles and many forms of cheap jewelry and ornaments. It has been said that the state of Florida receives more than a million dollars a year from trade in alligators.

Answer Letters Promptly.

Punctuality is as important in social and business correspondence as it is in personal conduct. Men and women in business learn the importance of replying to letters as soon as received. Formal social notes such as invitations, wedding announcements or death notices should be acknowledged as soon as received and even friendly letters demand a reply within a week after their receipt, if true courtesy is observed.—Biddy Bee.

His Summer Name.

One day William, while visiting his grandmother, heard the woman across the hall with her little dog. William inquired what she called the dog and she replied: "We call him Zero because we got him in the winter." William then asked: "Well, if you call him Zero in the winter what do you call him in the summer?"

Tools to Make a Rifle.

Nine hundred and ninety-seven cutting tools alone are required in manufacturing a modern rifle. The twist drill is one of the busiest of these. To supply 1,000,000 rifles, 94,000,000 holes must be drilled. Shrapnel, torpedoes, machine guns, planes, motor trucks and anti-aircraft guns require from 70 to 5,000 holes each.

GLASS THAT BOUNCES

May Be Bent Like a Cane, and Carried About in Liquid Form.

Two Austrian scientists have produced a glass that bounces, may be bent like a cane, and carried about in liquid form like water.

This invention, synthetic glass, is a product of the condensation of formaldehyde and urea, and has amazing properties. In its liquid state it is crystal clear, but is actually more like glue than water. When heated to a certain temperature it becomes solid, with the appearance and transparency of ordinary glass.

But what marvellous glass! Its resilient qualities are shown in its pliancy and in the manner in which a ball of it will rebound like rubber. It is half the weight of ordinary glass, and when broken it does not splinter, but cracks like toffee. What a boon to motorists! It has remarkable optical properties. Unlike ordinary glass, it transmits the ultra-violet rays of the sun—whose curative value science recognizes — so that the time will come when healthcentres will be built of this material, saving the invalid from exposure to cold.

These are only a few of the characteristics and uses of synthetic glass. It can be employed in hundreds of ways, and some trades will be revolutionised by it. Its greatest use will probably be in the motor industry, for it will make the ideal windscreen, minimising the danger of injury in accidents.

Being of vegetable, or organic, origin, synthetic glass in its liquid state can be mixed with organic dyes, with the result that imitations of all kinds of rare gems can be produced. This opens up a great prospect for the jewellery trade, for these imitations will almost certainly be turned out in large quantities.

The discovery will be an invaluable aid to the painting industry. Every painter knows there could be nothing more desirable than a pure white foundation for varnishes. Think, too, how glass tables could be banished from such a wonderful substance — lamp-shades, door-knobs, ash-trays, finger-plates for doors, to mention only a few. And these articles will be immensely superior to the old-fashioned kind because of their resistance to breakage.

Imitation opal-glass and porcelain of the most receptive kind have been manufactured from this magic liquid, which can be employed also in the making of spectacles and in the production of straw and felt hats, fountain pens, travellers' requisites, show cases, telescopes, and even shop and other signs, for one can write on synthetic glass with certain acids.

Even this does not exhaust the uses of the invention. Every woman will be interested to hear how it is being utilized in the textile industry. A method has been discovered of printing the liquid glass on to fabrics, to give a new, and beautiful, effect. Dresses, shawls, scarves, and so on can be treated in this way. In the process, which is carried out by automatic machine, the glass or bead becomes part of the fabric and cannot be detached—except by the destruction of the material. No more trouble, therefore, through beads dropping off dresses.

All the rights in the invention have been secured by an Englishman, who has kept pace through the years with the progress made by the two scientists, Dr. Fritz Pollak and Dr. Virgil Ripper, while they worked patiently in their laboratory in Vienna. A British company has been formed to exploit the invention for the bead-printing process, has been established in Northampton.

THE LUCKY BRIDE.

It Should Be, If Beliefs a Thousand or More Years Old Are True.

At a recent society wedding the bride as she approached and escorted to the chancel by her father, caught her foot in the carpet, and stumbled. "How lucky," she exclaimed, smiling. "Now I'm sure to be happy." If beliefs a thousand or more years old are true. If, however, the incident had happened to the bridegroom's way of church, ill luck would have dogged her marriage venture. "She shall be wooed and Happyesse, and shall be Short in many Teares, being widow'd Early," is the gloomy future predicted for her.

Here are some other quaint beliefs:

If, by mistake, the bridegroom takes his place on the wrong side of his bride, he "will be no Master of his own house, but will be Shrew'd," in other words he will be henpecked!

It is very unlucky, of course, to drop the ring. If the bride does it, "She shalle not keepe her husband's love, which shalle leave her for another, to her sorrow."

Things are not quite so bad for the bridegroom, "He shalle not prosper for 3 years and a day."

If the parson retrieves the ring he must place it within his "booke" for a little while. It is most unlucky for anyone save he and the "clerke" to pick it up.

Once upon a time all brides wore something of blue, brown with a turquoise, or a piece of blue rubbon. Happiness was thereby assured.

A Little Error.

Patrick had a bad attack of that very annoying ailment, toothache. At last he decided he could stand the gnawing pain no longer, and made up his mind to have the offending molar extracted.

He walked down the main street of the town, and at last he came to a dentist's establishment, outside which hung a sign with the words: "Painless extractions."

He stopped a passer-by and inquired the meaning of the expression "Why, it means just what it says," was the answer. "That dentist takes teeth out without pain."

He went inside, and the tooth was soon out.

"Thank you, sir!" said Pat, as he made for the door.

"That will cost you $1," said the dentist, following him.

"One dollar!" said Pat, surprised. "Why it says outside the door that you take teeth out without pain!"

The Jail.

"I am going to visit the jail. There is a man I want to see there."

"Is one all? I know about forty whom I should like to see there."

CORSICA'S ROBIN HOOD

LIVED SIXTEEN YEARS AS FUGITIVE OF JUSTICE.

"Nonce" Romanetti Was Both Law-Breaker and Enforcer of the Law —Died From a Shot in the Back— People Mourn His Death.

Corsica's best known and most popular citizen is dead and the whole island, with the exception of the gendarmes and a few youths who were lifted on his behalf, is in mourning. It is true that the dead citizen was an outlaw, but he was the kind of outlaw that Robin Hood was, and Robin Hood is a national hero in an extremely law-abiding nation. The dead hero is "Nonce" Romanetti. His Christian name was Ronce, but it was changed after he had achieved a reputation for eluding the police, "nonce" meaning "not here." For sixteen years he lived as a fugitive from justice, and in that time killed a dozen or more men. Most of them were gendarmes, killed in the way of business. The others were lawbreakers. One or two were citizens who sought to seek revenge on the outlaw. But he does not appear to have been a robber, or if he did, turn highwayman now and then, the proceeds would find their way to some poor widow. He was both a law-breaker and an enforcer of the law. He notified usurers, oppressors of the unfortunate and corrupt politicians that if they did not mend their ways he would end their lives, and he always made good. That is why the whole countryside befriended him and shielded him from the police.

Romanetti did not become a bandit because he was naturally criminally inclined. It was his fondness for ladies that led him into his first trouble. He fell in love with the daughter of a neighboring rancher and proclaimed himself in such fervid language that the neighbors thought it a reflection upon their honor. There was a feud and Romanetti stabbed the girl's father. He said that he had only defended himself from an attack, and either this fact or the fact that his foster father was a captain of gendarmes was responsible for the light term of imprisonment which he served. He returned to his little ranch where he and his sister raised cattle and was none the less popular because of his brief detention. One night before a notable village feast, it was discovered that the prospective merrymakers were short of meat and Ronce offered to spend the night in the hills and round up some of his own beeves for the barbecue. In the midst of the subsequent feasting a relative of the man he had stabbed appeared and asserted that Ronce had stolen one of his cattle. The young man said that if he had done so it was by mistake and he offered to pay for it.

But it was revenge not money his enemy sought and he insisted that the young fellow should be arrested. Forthwith the bandit drew his knife and slew his persecutor. He then fled to the bush and remained there for sixteen years. He was provided with food by the country people, and his sister managed the little ranch so well that he was usually in funds. He rode a horse and his constant companion was a dog which acted as his scout and defender. The police took to his trail and it became necessary for him to change his hiding place time. But this did not injure his reputation with the Corsicans. They understood that the duty of the police was to kill the bandit and the duty of the bandit was to kill the police. Many traps were laid for him, and Romanetti, like Robin Hood, ladies they were usually baited with a comely girl. One, for a sum of money, a girl consented to entice "Nonce" to her home. She got him inside the door and manoeuvred him in front of it, at the same time giving the door a push with her toe. The bandits' dog flung himself between the door and his master and "Nonce" fearing a trap, seized the girl and threw her against the door. At the instant later it was shattered by a storm of bullets but, when the gendarmes entered the house Romanetti was gone, the girl lay dead on the floor.

Writing in the New York Times, Mark Goodrich says that when a transcontinental airliner from Nice, carrying four passengers and a load of valuable mail, crashed near Ajaccio, the only one to escape was the single survivor, charged a farmer on pain of death to carry the valuables safely to the Prefect in Ajaccio, and sent word to the authorities of the accident. Often homesickness for the old safe life in the villages used to drive Romanetti to drastic, and enacted some intoxicated bit of bravado or defiance against the police. It must have been on such an occasion that, according to legend, he planted himself on the edge of a sheer precipice, where he was singing fierce and bullding songs that he himself had composed. He was waving his gun at the world and glaring affectionately at the sun. Down upon him around the shoulder of the mountain rode the Ajaccio gendarmes. In desperation "Nonce" flung himself backward off the precipice into the hazy void of the valley. He landed far below on a flock of sheep, which saved him from serious injury but left him stunned. The shepherds quickly picked him up and hid him in a nearby cave. When the gendarmes finally got down and around to the spot, they encountered his crushed body, as they had hoped, but a shepherd's tale of how Romanetti had miraculously landed on his feet, intimidated them, and made off down the valley.

He used frequently to enter the towns openly and display himself. When the President of France visited Corsica, and was being received with the greatest ceremony, Romanetti suddenly appeared gravely saluting the M. Millerand was for a second the centre of the scene. Before the astounded police could seize him he had again disappeared. Just how he died may never be known. The official report is that he was ambushed and killed by the Ajaccio Police Guard. But the Corsicans doubt it, as his body was not riddled with bullets but with shot which had been emptied into his back at a distance of not more than four yards.

AN ADVISORY BOARD ON COLONIZATION

At the last Dominion Boards of Trade Convention in Winnipeg, a resolution was unanimously passed urging upon this immigration policy as a means of solving Canada's industrial transportation and taxation problems. This resolution recommended the immediate creation of a small non-political advisory board or commission on colonization and agricultural development, composed of Canada's leading experts on the subject and skilled executives, such persons to be invited to contribute their time as a matter of public service and without compensation other than expense allowances.

NATIONAL SERVICE ITS OWN REWARD.

When this request was presented to the Federal Government, the Prime Minister is said to have expressed some doubt as to whether the right type of men would be willing to render national services on the basis suggested. The functions of such a body would not be administrative, but purely advisory, and it can scarcely be doubted that Canada's most outstanding men would cheerfully accept this responsibility without compensation. In fact, the services of such men could never be obtained by the Government on any salary basis within the customary limits of governments.

FOLLOW AUSTRALIE'S LEAD.

The average Canadian voter, while tacitly agreeing that energetic immigration effort is highly desirable, is very far from an adequate realization of the vital importance of sending the present "waiting on Providence." The problem of population is by far the greatest that faces Canada, and an advisory board, bringing fresh minds to bear on the subject, could render services of incalculable value. Maybe the state Government "commissions" have never been popular in Canada. But one finds it difficult to understand what objections could be raised to "commandeering" our best brains and experience to form its efforts on our most vital national problem. Australia has recently followed this sensible and efficient course.

THE MASTER MIND

Novelized by Marvin Dana. Author of "Within the Law." From the Successful Play by Daniel D. Carter

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Company

Then steps sounded in the hall, and Walter appeared in the doorway. There was a sarcastic inflection in Andrew's voice as he made the introductions with a wave of his hand:

"Walter, your father—your mother. Mr. and Mrs. Blount, your son."

Without another word he turned and went out of the room.

It was Blount who first spoke. With a bluff cheeriness of greeting in his heavy voice, he said:

"Well, well! How are you, son?" He smiled a genial welcome.

Walter replied briskly in kind:

"Fine, dad!"

A snort of indignation from Mrs. Blount interrupted the complacency of the two men, who turned toward her interrogatively.

"What's the matter, mother?" the husband questioned, with a touch of solicitude in his manner.

"Get that, Sadie?"

suited to the event and spoke in tones broken with emotion.

"This is all so—so affecting!"

"Huh!" Walter ejaculated huffily. "I guess!"—

Mrs. Blount interrupted:

"Father, why don't you introduce me to my son?"

"Sure do!" Walter remarked, with a grimace. "I'm just dying to meet mother."

Blount cleared his throat impressively and spoke with a bow as low as a generous paunch would permit.

"Mother," he said tenderly, "this is our son—our only son to this date, Walter."

Mrs. Blount beamed roguishly.

"Ain't he the cute little son?" she gushed. "Oh, sonny!" She advanced with fond haste toward the disconcerted Walter, with the evident intention of bestowing on him a chaste embrace.

"Aw, cut that out!" the son cried, flinchingly, as he drew back in alarm before the threatened onslaught.

"Why, Walter!"

"Oh, thunder!" Walter expostulated. "Say, what's the use of that bunk?"

Mrs. Blount spoke seriously now.

"No use, of course," she admitted gravely. "It's funny, though," she added, a little wistfully; "just for a minute I felt, somehow, like you might be my boy, sure enough—the one I never had. Ain't that the limit now?"

"Well, I ain't!" the young man declared crossly. "So we'll cut out the coddling. See?"

Mrs. Blount's humorous sense of the situation caused her again to speak.

"I can't see that he's changed a mite, dad," she remarked, with a mellow gurgle of laughter.

"Aw, cut that!" Walter insisted sullenly.

"Do you know what you're up against?" he questioned shrilly. "I tell you, straight, this game's dangerous. Do you know, it's some kind of a frame up Andrew's got against Wainwright?"

"Wainwright!" Blount cried, aghast at this disquieting statement as to the thing in which he had become involved. "You don't meant the one here—the one that was district attorney?"

"That's just the guy I mean," was the savage assurance.

Blount showed symptoms of alarm. His ruddy face grayed a little, and the heavy flesh of the jowls sagged.

"It don't look good to me," Blount confessed somberly. "What's the idea?"

Walter shook his head in admission of ignorance.

"All I know is that he's got it in for Wainwright." Again he shook his head. "That's all I know. Whatever it is, it's something fierce. If you don't believe me just mention the name of Wainwright some time when he's around. You watch him then, and you'll see, all right."

By a great effort of self control Blount reassumed his manner of geniality.

"Well, well!" he exclaimed patronizingly. "I really must look into this matter, quite in the interests of my friend. You know, I'm an old friend of Andrew's, and merely to oblige him I've agreed to adopt a son and daughter for a few weeks."

Mrs. Blount spoke aggressively.

"Yes, John," she said, "and you know he absolutely assured us that the whole thing was only a harmless joke." She hesitated slightly, then continued doubtfully, "But if it's as Walter says"— She broke off, frowning.

"Listen here, son," he said presently, with a return to his kindlier manner. "If I'm going to be a father to you I've got to be it all the time, that's certain—not merely when somebody else is around. I can't be a fond father one minute and then be hating your insides the next, although when this thing is all over I might feel some different eyes! But as long as we're on this game I'm going to think a heap of you. Yes, that's the program, and it's got to be carried out no matter how much it hurts me."

Walter went forward a step toward the older man, with his jaw thrust out a little farther than usual, and shrugged his shoulders contemptuously.

"I've got you doped out all right," he said.

Blount sat erect, much surprised at the other's attitude of displeasure as well as by the utterance itself.

"Doped out!" he exclaimed.

Walter chuckled malevolently.

"I haven't got you pinned exactly," he admitted, "but I've got your class all right. Do you get me?"

Blount bounced heavily to his feet. His expression was suddenly grown sinister.

"My class?" he repeated blusteringly. Walter maintained his evil satisfaction.

"I'd be willing to bet you a hundred that you wouldn't put your Bertillon on a piece of wax."

Blount leaped forward with a lithe swiftness astonishing in one of his bulk.

"I— you!" he said very softly, but with an intensity more vehement than mere sound. "Now, you look here—and look mighty close! My name is John Blount. I'm your father. There's your mother. I'm from Laramie, Wyo.

"Now, you look here!"

They respect us out there. Understand? That goes as it lays. They're going to run me for mayor next spring, and my wife here is president of the Mothers' club. You can look up our record there right through for the last four years. We've lived straight, and we're going to remain straight. Now let me tell you something else. If you want to look any further back than that you're looking for trouble—and a chance to get crushed!"

There was a deadly ferocity in the tones.

"Aw, you needn't get so sore about it," Walter urged quaveringly.

Blount spoke again.

"It looks to me as if we were likely to be together for some time to come. As far as I know, you're just Walter Blount. Outside of Walter Blount I don't know who you are, and I don't care either."

Walter strove again to placate the man whom he had so seriously offended.

"Aw, I was just kidding," he protested weakly. His attempt at a propitiatory smile was tremulous.

Of a sudden a new curiosity stirred in Walter.

"And the girl—that skirt—my sister, you know! What is she?" he demanded. "Is she one of us?"

"She's only been with us a week," Mrs. Blount explained. "Came from across the pond, so how can we tell?"

Said Blount:

"We don't know a darned thing about the girl except that she's our daughter. That's all we're supposed to know, and it's all we need to know, at that." A sudden memory moved in the husband's brain, and he continued with increased sternness, "And another thing—don't you dare again to act like you did today at lunch. There we were a-dining at the Waldorf with fine people, and me a-bragging about our big ranches and our beautiful home out west. And then I caught you trying to cop a spoon, so that I had to kick you under the table." An old instinct revived from the association of ideas, and he added petulantly, "And it was a plated one, at that!"

"What's the odds?" she demanded very spiritedly. "Lots of perfectly respectable people take things like that at hotels just for souvenirs. Why, I know a lady that hasn't got two towels alike in her whole house. And she's real rich too."

Walter reverted to the subject of prime interest to him.

"And the girl!" he insisted. He gazed at Blount eagerly. "Do you think Andrew has anything on the girl, like he has on us?"

In an instant Blount had leaped close, his face furious with passion.

"Andrew hasn't anything on us!" he hissed.

A flash of anger gave fleeting courage to Walter.

"Huh!" he exclaimed scornfully. "Don't try and slip anything like that over!"

Andrew came in from the next room and stood directly between the two men. Then he addressed them with contemptuous coldness:

"If through jealousy and bickering you fail to act your parts so that in consequence my plans miscarry, it will count against you far more than would mere disobedience. What was the cause of this row?"

Blount pointed to Walter.

"Ask the whelp!"

"I was just kidding—that's all!"

"Take care, sir," Andrew said harshly. "One of these days my patience will be exhausted." He waited a moment, surveying the youth with a lashing stare. Then, abruptly, he doffed his dominant manner and in its stead assumed the pose of the respected servitor. He bowed humbly to Walter, the nominal head of the household. "Why not show your father through the house, sir?" he suggested.

At once, without any trace of embarrassment, he took the part assigned to him.

"Sure!" he exclaimed, boyishly aglow with pride in the new possession of this city home. He beckoned to the bewildered Blount. "Come on, dad!" he urged boisterously. "You'll sure find this place all to the good."

CHAPTER VI.

Lucene.

MISS. BLOUNT possessed the feminine trait of curiosity. She made a dawdling round of the room, scrutinizing every detail of its arrangement. At the very last she came to the little table toward which Andrew had glanced to note the shimmer of blue light. By instinct her eyes went straight to the ring on the instant of her approach. As she beheld the lusters of the jewel her handsome face suddenly flamed with greed, and she uttered an ejaculation of delight. For long seconds she contemplated the glittering bauble with rapture, bending her face ever closer and closer as under a spell. Then, in a sudden realization of her avaricious thought, she started guiltily, and peered about the room with furtive glances, to make sure that none spied upon her. Again, she studied the stone with a sensuous ecstasy in its prismed brilliance; again, she tore her eyes from its charm, and now she moved from it in resolute effort to escape temptation. But the old habit of life dragged her back to the table, and she put forth a covetous hand, seized the ring, carried it to her bosom, smiling.

But very soon her mood veered. The smile vanished from her full lips. Her expression became that of poignant grief. By slow degrees the hand that held the ring moved from her breast, reached to the table, set the jewel back in its place. It was at this moment that Andrew re-entered. At sight of him Mrs. Blount realized with a shudder how narrow had been the margin of her escape from detection in the very act of theft. She pointed toward the little table and spoke with a catch in her voice:

"Andrew, just look at what you left on that table there. It's a good thing there haven't been any strangers in the house with that lying around loose."

Andrew crossed to the table and picked up the ring. There was a faint smile on his closely set lips as he turned and went to the woman. He extended the ring with a slight bow.

"Mrs. Blount," he said pleasantly, "allow me." Andrew nodded assent as he dropped the ring into her itching palm. "Only a word of counsel," he said. "Remember that who I am and what my exact intentions may be are of no interest to you. So be careful." Having thus admonished her he left her alone to her happiness.

And Mrs. Blount, watching the luxurious play of the varicolored rays from the diamond, murmured contentedly in the softest notes of her throaty voice:

"Gee! It sure pays to be honest."

The servant soon announced to Andrew the arrival of Miss Blount and was directed to show the young lady into the library as soon as she should be ready for an interview.

Andrew descended to the library with an eagerness of expectancy that was almost disconcerting to himself. He ordered Parker, whom he found already stationed in the hall, to maintain the privacy of the library, to bring Walter on hearing the bell. And at last a delicate rustling of draperies sounded at the door, and Lucene entered.

The girl stopped short at sight of the man, arrested for a moment by the stress of emotion. No least trace of Magsie Flint, nursemaid and convict, remained visible in the poised loveliness of this gentle maiden. The promise of her beauty had been most nobly fulfilled. She was of dainty fairness, with a golden crown of locks like corn silk in the sun, as lustrous, as finely spun. The exquisite features, set in the perfect oval of the face, were pearl pure of coloring, save where the blood tint blushed in cheeks and deepened winsomely in lips.

At his smile Lucene came to him swiftly.

"Oh, at last!" she exclaimed.

His smile grew as he spoke:

"You're not going to be lonesome for France, are you, Lucene?"

"Indeed, no!" was the joyous answer, given with a half disdainful pout of the red lips. "I was happy enough there. But, after all, it wasn't America—it wasn't home."

Now, since her first strong emotion at the meeting was past, Lucene was constrained to astonishment over some thing strange and unexpected in the appearance of the man before her.

"Why, Mr. Andrew," she said, with some show of confusion over her own temerity, "how old you look! What is it? Oh, yes, of course! It's your clothes. What can it mean? Tell me, please."

At the request the smile vanished from the face of the Master Mind.

"Patience, patience!" he admonished. "You shall know all about everything presently, but not quite yet. It isn't necessary now."

Then he continued:

"Tell me, instead, his our little girl left her heart in Paris or has she brought it back intact?" Though he put the question so lightly, it was of import to him in his scheme of vengeance.

"Oh, neither the one or the other," Lucene declared, with a moue of resentment against the idea. "I left my heart here, sir, when I went away. You should know that, for I told you all about my one very meager romance, which can never come to anything, of course."

"Never is a long time," Andrew suggested drily, aware of the intricacies he had set in motion by his mechanism for the coercing of destiny. "So, then, you have actually remained faithful to the old memory all this long time?"

"Does it surprise you?" She became grave. "I think that I have that virtue—faithfulness," she said, hesitatingly. "It's only an ideal, perhaps, but"— she was violently aroused by Andrew's next words:

"I fancy," he said deliberately, "that I'm going to surprise you a bit. You shall see him soon."

The girl started, and her eyes sought those of the speaker in amazed questioning.

"Oh, Mr. Andrew! You can't mean—you can't mean"—

"Yes," the man said with quiet emphasis, "I do mean just what I have said. You shall see that ideal of yours very soon. That I promise you, my dear girl. Yes, you are to meet the one that owes his life to you, yet doesn't even know your name. And you are to meet him speedily too."

Lucene's eyes were like stars now, shimmering with the gusty joy of her heart, and her lips wreathed to a smile of delight.

"Oh, when?" she cried. "Oh, tell me when! It can't be true. It's too wonderful to be true. Is he—quite well?"

"Quite."

"When they took him away in the ambulance," she continued pensively, "I was sure that he must die, in spite of what I had tried to do for him."

"And so he would have died," Andrew said gravely, "but for you."

"I did do the right thing, didn't I?" she said appealingly.

"Yes," Andrew agreed. "You did the only thing that could have saved him. But tell me, if you please, how did you ever learn to make a tourniquet?"

"Why, as to that," came the ready reply, "I'd seen pictures of them in those first aid things on a placard in a train, and I studied them until I understood the principle just because I had nothing else to do at the time. And then," a tremor was in her voice at the memory, "when he was thrown from the automobile right there at my feet almost and lay bleeding so dreadfully, then somehow I remembered."

"And you never forgot him," the man exclaimed, betrayed into open expression of his wonder over this lightning welding of hearts. "And you never forgot," he repeated softly, with a half envious note in his voice. "You never forgot, though neither of you even so much as knew the other's name."

The suggestion in his words quickened the girl's curiosity.

"Oh," she begged, "who is he?"

Andrew regarded her quizzically.

"It was a small chance, a mighty small one, that you two should ever meet again, the little, friendless waif of the city and the brilliant man of the world. Yet so it was to be. Yes; it was for this purpose that I took the house here. For this same purpose I have created a family for you, Lucene, to take the place of the one you lost when you were a mere child. I have provided for you a father, a mother, a brother. Even I have made for you a blameless past—a past that will stand all the scrutiny it is ever likely to receive and more."

Nevertheless the girl, even in the face of these astonishing revelations, held her chief interest on that ideal around which had clustered the dearest reveries of her heart through the years. So now she made no comment, only:

"Does he remember me?"

"Much more than that," Andrew asserted briskly. "He has tried again and again to find you. Since my having you in charge it has been, of course, impossible for him to learn anything of you. But now the time has come to reveal you."

The girl's face darkened a little.

"Oh," she cried, grieved, "why didn't you let him find me, when you knew that I?"— Her voice broke piteously.

"In order, first, to educate and train you, so that there could be no question as to your fitness, your standing as a woman of refinement and breeding; and, secondly, to gain time for the blotting out of a past which, though you yourself were absolutely innocent, would have forever kept you apart from him."

The girl acquiesced by silence in the justice of her guardian's reasoning.

"And you really—really do know him?" she questioned.

"At least I have seen him, and I know that he exists right here in this very city just now," Andrew replied, smiling again.

"Oh! And don't you, too, admire him—ever so much?"

Fortunately for the girl's peace of mind she did not see the unlovely hardening of the man's face. But his self control was strong.

"Why, once he unknowingly rendered me a great service, and I—well, I desire to return it in kind."

"You mean, without letting him know?" In her eagerness the girl looked up into Andrew's face.

"Yes," came the glib explanation. "You see, Lucene, that's what these old clothes of mine mean. You will please remember that for the present I am merely Andrew Watkins, your brother's valet and confidential man."

"Oh, Mr. Andrew," she objected with some embarrassment, "don't you see that you're asking me to deceive him?"

"My dear little girl," he declared gently, "I am only doing my best to give you a fair chance of happiness."

The Master Mind walked away from his ward to where the call button was set in the wall. He pushed it to notify Parker that it was time for Walter's presence in the library.

Walter came into the room with curiously wrist large on his boyish face.

Andrew addressed the girl suavely.

"Permit me, Lucene, to introduce to you your brother, Mr. Walter Blount."

Walter strode forward and heartily shook the hand she reluctantly yielded to his proffered clasp.

"How do you do, Luce?" he exclaimed, with a brotherly familiarity highly distasteful to her.

Andrew frowned as he watched the airy intimacy of manner assumed by Walter. He again touched the bell call and spoke to Lucene.

"Parker will take you to Mrs. Blount," he said.

The girl went rather hastily out of the room.

The face of Andrew was forbidding as he spoke to Walter.

"You perceive," he said sharply, "that this young lady is not of your class. You must understand that thoroughly, and you must remember it, sir. Never presume."

The thief scowled heavily.

Mrs. Parks Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health

Toronto, Ontario.—"My daughter is 16 now and has been an invalid ever since she was six months old and has been compelled to remain out of school the greater part of the time. We have tried different kinds of medicine, but none helped her much. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was run-down, and it had helped me so much that I thought it might help her at this time. She has gained ever since she began taking it. She attends school every day now and goes skating, and does other out-of-door sports. I recommend this medicine to any one who is run-down and nervous and weak."—Mrs. PARKS, 106 Bond Street, Toronto, Ontario.

VITAMINS A, B, AND C.

INDISPENSABLE CONSTITUENTS IN NORMAL DIET.

Some Simple Facts About Nutrition Which Will Greatly Contribute to Growth and Health.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The vitamins are indispensable constituents of a normal diet. What is a normal diet? Well a normal diet must fulfil the following conditions:

(1) The diet must be quantitatively sufficient.

(2) The diet must contain a sufficient amount of protein, fat, and carbohydrate.

(3) The diet must contain the necessary inorganic salts.

(4) The diet must contain a certain amount of various amino acids.

(5) The diet must contain the three vitamins A, B, and C.

The animal body is unable to manufacture vitamins and they are essential to its life. Hence the animal body requires a fairly continuous supply of the vitamins, and the only way it can obtain them is by eating fresh vegetable foods or by eating the flesh or milk of other animals.

Vitamin A, is the most stable of the three, and animals possess considerable powers of storing this vitamin in their fat. Vitamin C is the least stable.

Young growing animals are the most susceptible to vitamin shortage, quick growing and pregnant animals require an abundant supply of vitamins. Fully mature animals do not feel vitamin shortage in their feed to the same extent as young animals do.

Vitamine A.

Vitamin A is synthesized by chlorophyll containing plants only, and the richest vegetable source are the green leaves and growing parts of plants. Seedlings grown without light do not produce Vitamin A. Animals feeding on green plants store Vitamin A in their fat deposits, so we find it abundant in meat fat, egg yolk and in milk fat. Marine animals feeding largely on the green growth of numerous water plants store large quantities of Vitamin A. Cod liver and shark liver oils are very rich in this substance. The amount of Vitamin A in the meat fat and milk fat depends entirely on the amount of vitamin in the feed consumed by the animal. The fat of grass-fed animals is rich in vitamin when compared with the fat of animals fed on the dry feeds of winter. It has been noted by all feeders that the summer milk is more satisfactory in the feeding of young animals.

The chief diseases produced in animals deprived of vitamin A are: (1) Arrested growth and Keratomatacia; (2) Lowered resistance to bacterial infection. (3) Marked effect on reproductive function, sterility. (4) Rickets and deficient dentition.

Vitmin B.

The body does not store this vitamin and certain animals, if deprived of foods that contain it, for a few weeks develop polyneuritis, or show a decline in body weight and muscular inco-ordination. In young animals deprived of foods containing Vitamin B the arrest of growth and the injurious effect on the nervous system is more marked than it is with older animals. Vitamin B is very widely distributed, being present in nearly all forms of plant life, particularly in seeds and yeast. The bran or husk of seeds and the germ are the portions where it is to be found. Highly-milled grain products are very poor in Vitamin B. Look to green vegetables, whole grain, unpolished rice, milk for this vitamin.

Vitmin C.

Young animals deprived of foods containing Vitamin C develop tenderness and swelling of the joints, tenderness of the gums, loosening of the teeth and a marked wastage of all the lymphoid tissues. Vitamin C occurs in all growing vegetable tissues as green vegetables, roots, grass and fruits. Small quantities are present in fresh meats and milk. The animal body cannot store Vitamin C so must depend upon supplies coming regularly in the feed. During winter, sprouted grains and roots are the two main sources of this vitamin for live stock as poultry and pigs.

General Effects.

Lack of vitamin in the food of animals produces effects that resemble starvation. Young suffer more than mature.

A cow cannot manufacture vitamins and put such in the milk. Hence the vitamin content of milk (which is the most important food of young) depends entirely upon the vitamin content of the cow's food. See that she gets a good liberal allowance of green stuff.—Stevenson, Dept of Extension, O. A. College.

Prevent the Development of Trouble.

Roup is an infectious disease caused by bacteria. The lining of the nose, eye, sacs below the eye, in the larynx and trachur are attacked and occasionally pneumonia develops. Weak birds are most susceptible. The strong ones may resist the infection or have only a milk attack. Living, weather and feeding conditions play an important part in this disease.

Prevention.—Clean, dry, well-ventilated quarters and proper feeding seem to be important points in the prevention of roup. Isolate any sick bird until the cause of the trouble is found. Clean up and disinfect. Use one-third teaspoonful of potassium permanganate to each gallon of drinking water. Get the water fountain up off the floor and so arranged that the bird can drink but not spill. A wet floor is a predisposing cause that can be avoided. Give the birds pure, dry air without draughts at all seasons. A bird can stand the wind outdoors but not when at roost within a building.—L. Stevenson, O. A. College.

Arsenical poisons will control most insects which eat the leaves.

Optimistic Thought.

Some Tables Priceless.

There is a tremendous demand today for old mahogany or oak tables. If there are any historic associations attached to these tables they bring fabulous prices. There are plenty of tables in the country possessing real historic interest, but none of them is in the least likely at the moment to come on the open market. The table on which Napoleon signed his abdication may be said to be priceless. In England there is a mahogany table which tradition says was washed up on the coast of Clare after the wreck of the Spanish armada.

Sunshine in October.

There is no season when such pleasant and sunny spots may be lighted on and produce so pleasant an effect on the feelings, as now in October. The sunshine is peculiarly genial; and in sheltered places on the side of a bank, or of a barn or house, one becomes acquainted and friendly with the sunshine. It seems to be of a kind and homely nature. And the green grass strewn with a few withered leaves looks the more green and beautiful for them.—Hawthorne.

Remove Mildew.

Take any common soap, slice according to area of material that is affected. Cut soap in small pieces, add a little water to it and put on top of stove until dissolved. When about the consistency of cream take from the fire. Stir in common salt and cover the mildewed fabric with the mixture. If one application does not suffice, two will be sure to do the work. After applying the mixture, expose to the sun for some hours and then wash off.

Old-Time Temperance Pledge.

An interesting relic of bygone days has come into the possession of the Scottish Society of Antiquaries, in the form of a minute book of the burgh of Selkirk which reveals an instance of a burgher who decided to "take the pledge" not to touch drink, so long ago as 1592. The burgher, Thomas Kerr, gave as his bond "one pair of gray russit brekiis."

Practice Cheerfulness.

Cheerfulness ought to be the viaticum virtue of their life to the old; age without cheerfulness is a Lapland winter without a sun; and this spirit of cheerfulness should be encouraged in our youth if we would have the benefit of it in our old age; time will make a generous wine more mellow; but it will turn that which is early on the fret, to vinegar.—Colton.

Merely a Superstition.

There is no kind of a, or instrument, which will locate minerals in the earth with any degree of certainty. Sometimes a bed of iron ore will affect the magnetic needle of a compass, or of a surveying instrument, but there is nothing that will locate the precious metals.

The homestead of the tennant of Shottery farm, brought to the hammer at Birmingham recently, was the house in which Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway are said to have plighted their troth according to the ancient rite of "handfast."

Simple Enough.

A manufacturer of some patent compound came into the laboratory of an analytical chemist one day with a bottle containing an unwholesome looking mixture.

"I would give £20," he said to know what would make the water and oil in this mixture separate."

The chemist looked at the bottle.

"Very well," he said; "write out your check."

"Check?" the other echoed.

"Yes, your check for £20. You say you are willing to give that, and for that price I am willing to tell you what will make the water and oil separate."

The visitor hesitated a moment and then wrote a check for the sum named. The chemist carefully deposited it in his pocketbook, and then quietly dropped into the liquid a pinch of common salt. Instantly the water and oil separated, and whether the client was satisfied or not, he had got what he wanted, and he had paid his own price for it.—London Tit-Bits.

What Memory Is.

The correct way to increase the productivity of the memory is to link every new thing with an understood thought already in hand. Merely to memorize the Bible and thus to be able parrot-like to speak it "by heart" is not memory. Intellectually and emotionally to appreciate and understand one psalm or proverb is memory. To know where to put your finger on the right verse or passage of the Bible on your table is practical and useful recollection. Dictionaries, directories, encyclopedias, indexes and reference books do the mechanical part for you. Reason, association, adaptability and the perception of relationships are better than much Latin and more Greek, however beautiful and instructive these may be in themselves.—Exchange.

The Marriage Yoke.

The dull boy in the class unexpectedly distinguished himself in a recent history examination. The question ran, "How and when was slavery introduced into America?" To this he replied:

"No women had come over to the early Virginia colony. The planters wanted wives to help with the work. In 1619 the London company sent over a shipload of girls. The planters gladly married them, and slavery was introduced into America."

The Planets.

Taking our earth as standard, the two planets nearer the sun—viz, Mercury and Venus—are designated as inferior and the five which are farther from the sun than the earth—viz, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune—are termed superior. As established and accepted by astronomers, Mercury is 35,951,105 miles from the sun; Venus, 67,196,688 miles; earth, 92,894,800; Mars, 141,542,690; Jupiter, 483,318,340; Saturn, 886,108,000; Uranus, 1,782,742,000; Neptune, 2,788,764,300.

Too Bold.

There is a local legend concerning Salisbury cathedral, in England. The cathedral is celebrated for its lofty spire, and the legend is that once upon a time a prisoner found guilty of some capital offense was sentenced to death and had the option given him of being executed in the usual way or of throwing himself from off the cathedral spire. He chose the latter, and, wonderful to say, he escaped death. Some time afterward he suggested he would do it again. He did, but this time his body was dashed to pieces.

Origin of "Argonaut."

The term "argonaut" comes from the legend of Greek mythology relating to the celebrated expedition headed by the hero Jason in search of the golden fleece. Naut is Greek for ship, and the vessel which bore Jason and his party was called the Argo; hence the gold hunting expedition was called the argonautic expedition and Jason and his followers argonauts, for the legend says the vessel was the first that ever sailed. Her name, Argo, has been given to one of the constellations of stars in the southern hemisphere.

The Time to Marry.

Hepsey, the maid of color, had told the mistress she was to be married.

"Well, Hepsey," said the mistress, "I'm sorry to loss you, but I suppose it is all for the best. How long have you known the man?"

"About two weeks, ma'am."

"My! No longer than that? Don't you think you ought to wait and get to know him better?"

"No, ma'am," exclaimed Hepsey. "Ef I knowed him any better I sho' never would marry him."

That First Submarine.

Speaking of undersea boats, a correspondent reminds me that we can go back further than Cornelius Van Drebbel for the first submarine. Alexander the Great is said to have used them, Pliny mentions something of the kind and as early as 1579 an English gunner, William Bourne, patented a submarine boat that had leather joints so contrived as to be made smaller or larger by the action of screws, ballasted with water and having an air pipe as mast."—London Standard.

No Disrespect.

Friend—I see you have turned your wife's picture to the wall. Isn't that rather disrespectful? Widower—No; it seems more natural. You see, most of my time at home I spent in buttoning her up the back.

Uncle Eben's Philosophy.

"De kind of optimism," said Uncle Eben, "dat ain' hitched up to hard work can't last."

Optimistic Thought.

He hath riches sufficient who hath enough to be charitable.

Daily Thought.

He who begs timidly courts a refusal.—Seneca.

Professor Laird's Third Cross-Canada Tour

Upper right—Wheat Fields of Western Canada.
Lower right—Famous Sulphur Pool at Banff.

Professor Sinclair Laird, Dean of the School for Teachers, Macdonald College, makes his third annual tour "Across Canada and Back" with a party of Easterners leaving Toronto by Canadian Pacific Railway on July 19. Professor Laird's remarkable success with the two previous tours evoked such large demands for another of these "nonparell" trips to the land of majestic peaks and purple mists that the third tour becomes a necessity, a national requirement.

A personal acquaintance with Canada's provinces is considered essential for every Canadian's education nowadays. Travel is a sound investment which not only maintains its value throughout life but adds continually to daily pleasure and efficiency. Nothing can take the place of the personal experience that comes through travel, leading educationalists the world over agree. In the realm of Canadian literature, history and geography, reading and teaching may be enhanced and brightened by personal familiarity after the subjects have been seen and admired.

And after the trip has been completed there will remain in the hearts of those who have made the journey the imprint of quiet valleys, wooded forests, and nature's dignified solitude. As Edith Johnson sang of the Rocky Mountains:

Farther than vision ranges,
Farther than eagles fly,
Stretches the land of beauty,
Arches the perfect sky.
Hemmed through the purple mists afar
By peaks that gleam like star on star.

The trip to the West covers the Muskoka district, and the world-famous mining region of Sudbury, Lake Superior is then skirted as far as Fort William, and thence to Winnipeg with a side trip to Winnipeg Beach, the Manitoban summer resort, and on to Indian Head, Regina, Moose Jaw and Calgary where the Canadian Pacific Rockies are entered through the Gap, two almost vertical walls of dizzy height, streaked and capped with snow and ice. Here we come to Banff, headquarters of the Rocky Mountains Park, a wonderful region of 2,761 square miles embracing rivers, lakes and noble mountain ranges.

From Banff to Windermere, 104 miles, the party under Professor Laird will go by automobile. Then from Windermere to Kootenay through beautiful Kootenay Lake to Nelson. Leaving Nelson they pass through the Doukhobor country to Penticton, skirt Okanagan Lake, cross Fraser River at Hope and proceed to Vancouver. After two days at Vancouver the party sails-to Victoria, affording an opportunity of seeing the famous Crystal Gardens.

Travelling back to the East the trip takes in the Fraser and Thompson River Canyons, and in especial the marvellous Lake Louise district. At the latter may be seen the white smoke of avalanches that go thundering down from the glacier four miles away. Lake Louise is about a mile and a quarter long and nearly half a mile wide. The Indians say its waters are distilled from peacocks' tails and paved with mother-of-pearl, and into them pour those wild blue waters whose colors are mixed on the palette of the glaciers.

On the journey back East the trip is varied by calls at Edmonton and Saskatoon, while the awe-inspiring Devil's Gap near Kenora is also taken in. A full day is spent at each of these places. From Fort William the party embarks on a Canadian Pacific steamboat on which they traverse Lakes Superior and Huron to Port McNicoll whence a short trip to Toronto ends the journey.

While the trip is under the leadership of Professor Sinclair Laird it is by no means confined to travellers who belong to the teaching profession, and in former years a large proportion has been composed of people drawn from industrial, business and municipal circles who desire to increase in this pleasant and unique manner their acquaintance with the facts of their own country.

She Had a Different Ambition.

When William Wilberforce, the reformer, was a candidate for parliament his sister, an amiable and witty young lady, offered the compliment of a new gown to each of the wives of those freemen who voted for her brother, on which she was saluted with a cry of "Miss Wilberforce forever!" where she pleasantly observed: "I thank you, gentlemen, but I cannot agree with you; for really I do not wish to be Miss Wilberforce forever!"—Boston Post.

Curious Collection of Pens.

In the prison at Lyons, France, there is a curious collection of pens. They are the pens with which the executioners signed the regulation receipts for the prisoners handed over to them to be guillotined. At each execution a fresh pen is used for the purpose and the ink is left to dry upon it.

In Mass Formation.

We've never had time yet to go up and ask that eminent biologist at Ohio State university how often under natural laws neighbors' cats are supposed to have kittens and can only say in a general way that they seem to be coming in mass formation.

Measured by Cubic Foot.

A cubic foot of water weighs 1,000 ounces; milk, 1,080 ounces; cider, 1,020 ounces; alcohol, 800 ounces; ice, 930 ounces; gold, 19,250 ounces; white oak, 880 ounces; poplar, 490 ounces; limestone, 2,960 ounces; wheat, 770 ounces, air, 1 ounce.

Modern Campers.

Elijah could spend a long vacation in the wilderness because of the ministration of the ravens; but other mortals have to take something along when camping out.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Let Your Work Be Thorough.

It does not make any difference at all how quickly you may get through your work, if, after you have finished it, some one else has to come along and really complete the job.

Communing With the Great.

You can, with that brain of yours, go to your library and commune with the innermost inert thoughts of the great men of the past—and what a feast it is!

Early Guidebook.

The earliest guidebook printed in English is "Instructions for Forraine Travell," published in 1642 by James Howell, a famous traveler of that day.

But They Don't Deceive Many.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "makes portend dey's gettin' wisdom when dey's only lookin' around indulgin' dair curiosity."

Optimistic Thought.

Riches are deservedly despised by a man of honor because a well stored chest intercepts the truth.

Buck Hares in Combat.

An Australian correspondent describes "a dinkum stand-up fight" between buck hares. "They prop upright on their hind legs and box with their front paws, sparring, ducking, upper-cutting in pugilistic fashion, for fly-ing in all directions. When one pugilist gets winded or passed out he falls on his back and skies his tail."

Why She Seeks a New Home.

Tillie Clinger says that the reason she is looking for another home is because the star boarder at her present place is a railroad engineer who wants the government to take over all the boarding houses and let the boarders run them.—Galveston News.

Wearing of Pearls.

It is a well-established fact that the more pearls are worn, particularly next to the skin, the more they increase in beauty and value. If unworn for any considerable length of time their luster becomes dimmed.

Fundamental Human Need.

It seems to me a great truth that human beings cannot stand on selfishness, mechanical utilities, economics and law courts; that if there be not a religious element in the relations of men, such relations are miserable and doomed to ruin.

Will They Say "Next?"

The Manchurian barbers are likely soon to blossom forth as full-fledged "tonsorial artists." Consular reports say they are replacing their antiquated and time-honored Chinese equipment with modern American barber supplies.

In an Airplane.

Exclusive of the engine, the average airplane contains 4,326 nails, 3,577 screws, 920 steel stampings, 798 forgings, 276 turn-buckles, 65 pounds of aluminum and relative quantities of varnish, rubber, linen, wood, etc.

In the Fog.

Automobile headlight reflectors made of gold rolled on copper bases are said to be unaffected by heat, dampness or salt air and to provide light of great penetration in fog.

Valuable By-Product.

A method has been discovered of distilling valuable products from the chips that accumulate in wood-working establishments, and of making paper out of the residue.

Uncle Eben.

"De man dat talks too much," said Uncle Eben, "an' de man dat don' talk at all both keeps you guessin' on what dey's thinkin' about."

Smokeless Fuel.

It has been discovered that anthracite culm mixed with about 20 per cent of soft coal makes a good smokeless fuel.

One Consolation.

There is one thing about bicycle riding—a round-shouldered man looks as well as anybody else.

Many Formations of Sponges.

Sponges are animals with power to eat and digest. They begin their life as tiny cell-like creatures and have a short, free life in the sea, after which they fasten themselves to a rock and begin to develop. They grow into all directions like fingers, and are called mermaid's gloves. There are fanlike sponges, treelike sponges and cuplike sponges. There are sponges that form a carpet over the rocks, and sponges called by the fishermen "sea nests," because they look like birds' nests.

Coming of Night.

Shadow creeps over lawns toward the lake, still radiant with day. Black and twittering, a bird picks its little path, delicately, near the border. The stillness of twilight reaches through the trees and seizes at length this small object. The immobility of its tiny organism is more wonderful than the immense stretching quiet of water and sky. From its glossy birdback the sun withdraws his pale fingers lingeringly and reluctant yields it to the night.

Innocence No Guard.

A southern newspaper contains the following item: "Joe Odom was acquitted of violating the prohibition law, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or serve three months at hard labor; the balance of the fine to be suspended during good behavior on payment of $50." We shudder to think of what might have been inflicted upon Joe had he been convicted instead of acquitted."

Valley of Great Natural Wealth.

The largest river emptying into the Pacific within the confines of Peru is the Santa, which waters the valley back of Chimbote, and is capable of supplying power to many industries and water for the irrigation of a vast area. In the Santa valley there exist extensive coal deposits. The coal found here is anthracite, and is said to be of a good quality for the manufacture of briquets.

Rich Platinum Rock.

Platinum is now being secured in Siberia from dunite, a conglomerate rock, which exists there in large quantities. By grinding and washing processes the platinum is extracted from the chromite ore contained in the rock. A recent experiment secured 200 ounces of platinum out of 9,720 pounds of chromitic slack.

An Old Resident.

Tommy, four, was taking his visiting aunt for a walk. She was a little dubious as to where Tommy was leading her, so finally she questioned: "Tommy, are you sure you know where you are going?" Tommy replied, scornfully: "Do you think I've lived four years in this city and don't know my way about yet?"

To Polish Steel.

A finely polished lusterless surface can be produced on steel by rubbing, after tempering, on a smooth iron surface with some ground silstone till it is perfectly smooth, after which it should be laid on a sheet of paper and rubbed backward and forward until it acquires a fine dead polish.

Losses Caused by Muskrats.

Muskrats are destructive to embankments, dams, canals and irrigation ditches. They delight in the leeway of artificial reservoirs. The breaking of mill dams in districts where manufacturers depend on water has often been charged to muskrats. In the spring of 1904 muskrats were busy with wrecking a dam at Thomaston, Conn., by burrowing into it, and damage of several thousand dollars was done by the escape of the water, and there are instances of other loss by the giving way of waterways.

What Contentment Means.

Everybody knows that concentration is the secret of doing the best work, but some people fail to realize that a lack of concentration is the secret of so much nervous, taxing, hurried work. It is the thought of something else we need to do which makes us feel that we must race through what we are engaged in, and makes every instant's delay so excessively trying. Could we learn to think only of the task in hand, we should do it better, and far more happily.

Cost of Writing Letters.

Have you ever figured out the cost per letter of your business correspondence? Taking into consideration the cost of stationery and stamps, the salary of the stenographer, cost of all accessories to the typewriter, all overhead charges, and last, but not least, cost of time of the man who dictates the letters, it works out at 40 cents per letter, and that is an absolute minimum.

What Impressed Him.

At the age of four Thomas was taken to interview the menagerie. When the party stopped before the lion's cage Thomas' sister informed him that this animal was called a lion. For a few moments Thomas was bewildered at the abundance of flowing hair the lion possessed, and then suddenly exclaimed: "Some mustache, believe me!"

Value in Association.

"I believe in association as the sole means of realizing progress—not merely because it multiplies the action of the productive forces, but because it tends to unite all the wants manifested and in the human mind, and to bring the life of the individual into communion with the collective life of the whole

The Medical James.

Speaking of units, as we often do nowadays, a Londoner had occasion to pay frequent visits to an eminent physician, and he said one day to the attendant: "You will be tired of opening the door for me, James." "Not at all, sir," was the gracious reply; "you are but a bunit in the hocean, sir."

Tigers Fond of the Water.

Tigers are extremely fond of bathing. In a zoo, if a tub be provided, they will eagerly make use of its facilities for ablution. They are first-rate swimmers, and in former days it was reckoned at Singapore that they "ate a Chinaman a night," swimming across from the mainland to get him.

U. F. A. GOVERNMENT RETURNED TO POWER IN ALBERTA CONTEST

Calgary, June 28.—The United Farmers of Alberta will form the next Government in the Province as a result of the Provincial elections today.

While counts under the preferential system of voting were far from complete early tonight, the Government condidates were leading in so many constituencies by large majorities that it was conceded that the only doubtful aspect remaining was the majority by which the U.F.A. would rule in the Sixth Legislature of the Province.

REAL BATTLE IN CITIES.

The U.F.A. Government, in an extremely active election campaign, stood on its record during its first term of office. Liberals and Conservatives contested all constituencies in the Province, three-cornered battles being the rule in the rural constituencies, while in Edmonton and Calgary there were battles royal for the five city seats.

At 10.30 p.m., the standing of the various parties in the Provincial election, including those known to be elected and others leading on the first count, is as follows: Farmer, 41; Liberals 10; Conservative, 5; Independent-Farmer, 1; Independent, 1; Labor, 2; Independent-Labor, 1; total, 69.

In the cities, with the first count almost half completed, the candidates leading on the first count for the five seats were:

Edmonton—U.F.A., Conservative, Liberal, Independent and Liberal in the order named.

Calgary—Conservative, Liberal, Conservative, Independent, Conservative.

Thos. Charlton, an Oso township resident on Tuesday of last week killed his wife with a shot gun and committed suicide by taking strychnine. Domestic trouble is given as the cause of the tragedy.

The Canadian National Railway is proposing to take off the surburban train running from the outer station to the lower city station at Kingston, and considerably enlarge the facilities of the outer station.

The members of the Napanee Fire Department wish to publicly thank Messrs. W. R. Lott and Alf. McCutcheon for donations of money as a token of appreciation of their services at the time of their recent fires.

Falling off a pier, at the entrance to the Rideau Canal, where he had been visiting, William Eaves, aged seventy-six years, a resident of Newboro, for many years, was drowned some time on Wednesday night. His body was recovered on Thursday forenoon.

The new club house of the Napanee Golf and Country Club is nearing completion and will be ready for use in a couple of weeks. Many other improvements are being made to the golf course. Ornamental gateways of cobble stones are being built and the ground surrounding the club house will be improved. A new mower, specially made for use on golf courses has been purchased.

ROD AND GUN.

Published for the first time, the official photographs and account of the Canadian Government Arctic Expedition of 1925 will interest readers of Rod and Gun. The story of the trip to the fields with its three full pages of unusual photographs, is only one of the interesting features of the July issue of Rod and Gun, just published. Bourmont to Maniwaki is a yarn of a canoe trip in the wilds of Quebec, well told by J. Jenkins, while William E. Dalton has some good wrinkles for trappers.

Bonnycastle Dale this month tells something of the Commercially Furred Destroyers, namely the mink and the weasel. Fishing notes has an interesting line-up for the anglers this month and Fishing Regulations for the current year are included in the issue. Outdoor Talk and Guns and Ammunition with Kenuel and J. W. Winson's article on the owl are of usual high standard.

Editorially in the June issue, Rod and Gun takes issue with Senator Belcourt's proposed bill to further restrict the sale of firearms. The magazine raises the contention that the bill is not in the interests of Canadian sportsmen, and announces its intention of fighting the proposed legislation on that ground.

Rod and Gun is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ontario.

THAT MYSTERIOUS ART—BEING A WOMAN

Freedom, frankness—"Never was femininity so much a fine art," declares the younger.

Being a woman means a lot to-day. She wants more, she gets more. But she has to put more into the job. She has to cultivate beauty—she must have wit and poise and style, and that mystery, charm.

It's a strange art—made up of several things. Personal things. She has to fight for it.

Our corset department will assist you in maintaining your slim, curveless lines that make for poise, beauty and charm.

Here we have assembled a magnificent range of styles from the most outstanding manufacturers on the continent. Here are figure-type garments for all types of figures. Here you may choose from the newest silhouettes in modern corsetry.

Our summer stock is complete. Choose new corset garments for your vacation wardrobe. Our Corsetieres will gladly assist you.

Summer is here and everyone must wear adorable frocks, frocks that will answer the call for every hour of a woman's day.

We have them. Robinson's "Dress" department teems with new and attractively styled garments—garments "so new" that even New York has nothing newer to offer—Garments "so exclusive" and "so varied" in assortments that any woman can give expression to her own particular likes and dislikes—Garments "so reasonably priced" as to make it impractical for any woman to go without.

Your inspection is invited.

LINOLEUM BUILDS SERVICEABLE FLOORS

NEW PATTERNS IN FOUR-YARD WIDTHS

The advantages gained with linoleum over other floor coverings are numerous. In the first place it is economical—Secondly, it is artistic—Thirdly, it is serviceable.

We have just placed in stock a new shipment in the four-yard widths. The patterns and colorings are highly delightful.

These are in our regular "E" quality, which we are selling very specially at $1.00 per yard.

If you have a new floor to cover, consult our department. Estimates and ideas gladly furnished.
